CASA BLANCA INCIDENT IS SMOOTHED OVER

Kaiser Approves of Entire Matter Being Referred to Hague Tribunal.

Paris, Nov. 10.—The foreign office regards the Casa Blanca incident, the case of the German deserters from the foreign legion of the French army, which has disturbed the relations between France and Germany for ten days past, as virtually closed, and expects that an agreement will be signed to-day. Instructions have been telegraphed M. Cambon, the French ambassador in Berlin, to accept the proposals submitted by Baron von Waehter of the German foreign office for the approval of Emperor William. It is consequently conceded here that the matter will be sent to the Hague for arbitration.

While there is no disposition to crow over the French victory, great satisfaction is expressed that Germany finally has recognized the justice of the French agents at Casa Blanca, in advance of arbitration. Germany places her acquiescence to this view upon the widely divergent character of the reports concerning the incident sent in by agents of France and Germany respectively.

The formula of settlement as now accepted consists of two declarations. The first is practically identical to the one submitted by Ambassador Cambon last week, and provides that after the exchange of expressions of mutual regret that the incident occurred, the entire question of law and facts shall be submitted to the arbitration of the Hague tribunal; this in view of the contradictions in the French and German reports of the incident. The second condition is that the country whose agents are adjudged at fault shall apologize to the other.

Kaiser Acquiesces.
Berlin, Nov. 10.—(L.A.P.)—The new form of settlement has been approved by Emperor William which means that its acceptance by the government also is secured.

FORMER U. S. SENATOR SHOT IN STREET DUEL

Tragic End of E. W. Carmack Causes a Great Sensation in Tennessee.

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 10.—Former United States Senator Carmack, editor of the Nashville Tennessean, was shot and killed by Duncan Cooper and his son, Robin Cooper, in a three cornered street duel late yesterday afternoon. The assault was the result of publishing in the Tennessean of an attack on father and son.

Messages by wire and mail from various sections testify to the tremendous sensation caused throughout the state and the south by the killing of former Senator E. W. Carmack by young Robin Cooper in a street duel here late yesterday.

Carmack's brilliant career as a United States Senator from Tennessee, his national figure, Col. Duncan Cooper, father of young Robin Cooper, who was with his son when the duel occurred, has an extensive acquaintance and a legion of friends both in his own and various states.

Carmack's race for the Democratic nomination for senator in which he was defeated by Senator Robert Taylor, and his more recent race for the governorship in which he was defeated by Governor Patterson, has served to draw his followers in the state closer to him, and his tragic end has spread distress and bitterness among them.

Young Cooper after having his wounds dressed, spent a quiet night in a hospital last night in charge of an officer. His injuries proved to be slight and this morning he was reported as resting easily. His father spent the night at police headquarters and is reported to have slept well.

Col. Cooper turned over his revolver, none of the chambers of which had been emptied, to a police sergeant. Robin Cooper did likewise with his, and one empty shell dropped out of the magazine when the young man's weapon was unbraced. It is an automatic magazine revolver and it is not known how many shots had been fired, but it was thought that an examination would show three. Two chambers of the revolver of Senator Carmack were empty.

Only two statements were made by young Cooper while in the physician's office last night. One was a request to his father to give up his pistol and in the other he said: "I'm sorry the shooting occurred."

KILLED IN GAS EXPLOSION.

Toronto, Nov. 10.—G. J. Frost, aged 66, for 25 years caretaker of Upper Canada College, was killed in his home yesterday by an explosion of gas. While searching for a leak with a lighted match, an explosion followed and gutted his home in Deer Park. His eldest daughter made a heroic effort to save his body, but was driven away by the flames. He leaves his grown-up children.

HOLLAND FREE TO ACT.

Suspension Treaty With Venezuela. The Hague, Nov. 10.—Addressing the second chamber yesterday, Foreign Minister Swinderen explained that the suspension of the Holland-Venezuela treaty of 1894 had been ordered because President Castro had failed to comply with the demand of the Netherlands government that the transshipment decrees issued last summer against Curacao be withdrawn before November 1st. This, he said, left Holland free to act, and the government had cabled the governor of Curacao that Holland considered herself free from all obligations toward Venezuela. Furthermore, the governor was instructed temporarily to suspend the prohibition against the exportation of arms from Curacao to Venezuela.

HELD IN BED AT REVOLVER POINT

HOUSE IS RIFLED FROM CELLAR TO ROOF

Extraordinary Daring Robbery in Brooklyn House—Wed- ding Rings Left.

New York, Nov. 10.—With the ray of a burglar's lantern shining in their eyes and two revolvers held by masked men covering them, the five members of the family of Charles E. Tayntor, a wealthy granite dealer, lay in bed in the Tayntor home at Borough Park, Brooklyn, for more than an hour on Sunday morning while a third masked burglar piled up $10,000 worth of jewelry and silverware. Then the burglars bound Mr. Tayntor, hand and foot, and escaped with their booty.

The burglary was most daring, and Mr. Tayntor is convinced that the robbers spent many days in planning it. Mr. Tayntor, who has a number of rich granite quarries in New England, is known as a crack shot. He is a member of the New York State Rifle Association and was a contestant in the recent Olympic pistol tournament at Bielefeld, England. It is believed that the burglars knew this and took no chances with him.

The three men, when they gained entrance to the house, went immediately to a bedroom on the second floor occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Tayntor, and one of the burglars struck Mr. Tayntor a crushing blow on the head with a blackjack as he lay asleep. The blow stunned him, and a few minutes later, when Mr. Tayntor recovered his senses, he found three revolvers leveled at him.

Mr. and Mrs. Tayntor were made to sit up in bed, and two of the burglars held them covered while a third began a search of the room. The noise awakened Miss Tayntor, the 15-year-old daughter of the granite dealer, and she came into the room, crying. The burglars ordered her into bed with her parents, and the child obeyed. A moment later Charles Tayntor, aged 5 years, and Harold, 12, came into the room. (Continued on page 12.)

SUICIDES RATHER THAN ASSASSINATE HIS KING

Action of ex-Deputy Creates Tremendous Sensation in Portugal.

Lisbon, Nov. 10.—Alberto Costa, a former member of the chamber of Deputies, committed suicide here yesterday. His act has created a tremendous sensation and the police are conducting an investigation.

Senator Costa was a member of the Pink Cross Society, which was involved in the assassination last February of King Carlos and Crown Prince Luis. It is believed that this society selected Costa by lot to kill the present King Emmanuel, and that Costa preferred to kill himself to committing this deed.

PAPER STRIKE OVER.

International Company to Run Mills As "Open Shops."

Watertown, N. Y., Nov. 10.—The paper makers' strike against the International Paper company, which has been on since Aug. 1, has been officially declared off by the union under the same conditions as provided for in the agreement of Sept. 24, between President Carey of the union and the International, which were not ratified by the locals of the international union.

The company will take the men back as fast as needed, but they must apply as individuals, and the mills will be run as "open shops." A conference was held at Albany between President Carey, Secretary O'Connor and representatives of the locals which make up the international with the agreement of September 24 as the basis. The men struck against a reduction of ten per cent. The September agreement is a compromise, calling for a reduction of five per cent.

STRIDES MADE BY LABOR MOVEMENT

WORKERS ORGANIZING IN CANADA, SAYS GOMPERTS

Dominion Secretary of Trades and Labor Congress Reports Enthusiastic Progress.

Denver, Colo., Nov. 10.—At the meeting of the American Federation of Labor yesterday, the annual report of President Gompers, which deals at considerable length with his so-called political stand, as well as other important matters affecting the Federation, was read.

Referring to the labor movements in Canada, Mr. Gompers says: "It is with much satisfaction that I can report the great growth in the labor movements among our co-workers in the Dominion of Canada. Those entrusted with the affairs of the movements both local and provincial in the Dominion, are so earnest and loyal that they see to it that the interests of the workers are promoted both nationally and internationally."

"It is interesting to note that despite the efforts of those who would under the reciprocal and beneficial international fraternal relations which exist among the workers of Canada, the United States and the entire continent of America, the bonds of unity and fellowship are constantly, and more firmly cemented. The frequent intercourse of representative labor men with our fellows on both sides of the border, aided by special organizers, John T. Flett, and the volunteer organizers' work of unification of the aims and aspiration of the workers are bringing beneficial economic and material results. The exercise of legislative and political rights must, of course, always be mutually recognized and conceded."

"In a report recently made by the secretary of the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress, whom we honor and welcome with us to-day in the capacity of fraternal delegates to our conference, P. M. Draper says: 'Without any exaggeration it can be said that never in the history of the labor movements in Canada has such progress been shown in the organization of the workers. The knowledge of power when united has swept throughout the length and breadth of the country and despite the old motto-eaten appeals to prejudice and self-interest, despite misrepresentation, persecution and coercion, the forces of labor have continued to unite.'"

"To-day the organized workers in Canada breathe the same aspirations, harbor the same ambitions and struggle for the same end namely the elevation and betterment of the masses of toilers who suffer not only from the 'wages and arrows' of outrageous fortune, but from the oppressive and unjust laws and their prejudicial administration, uncivilized conditions surrounding the every-day worker, men, women and children and more than the thousands and one ills that affect the flesh."

"Unbounded enthusiasm is the keynote of the movement in Canada. In every province throughout Canada, from British Columbia in the west to Nova Scotia in the east, the uplift has begun, the eyes of the toilers are at last opened to the futility of dependence upon others than themselves. They see the necessity for strong international organizations. The urgency for sending their own representatives to the legislature to take part in making the laws which they must obey, has appealed to them as never before. A healthy optimism inspires the whole movement in such a way as to give promise of the beneficial results."

The two strongest features of the labor movement in Canada, at the juncture are: First—Unswerving fidelity to the cause of international trade unionism; and, secondly, an equal loyalty to independent political action support of the candidature or representation of labor."

The popularity of President Gompers was attested when he rose to call the convention to order. The delegates applauded Mr. Gompers for several minutes before he was allowed to make himself heard. In his address in response to the address of welcome, Mr. Gompers was frequently applauded.

SERIOUS ILLNESS OF CHINESE EMPEROR

Death of Kwang-Su Would Mean Crisis in Celestial Empire.

Peking, Nov. 10.—The Emperor of China who has been suffering for nearly two weeks from an intestinal disorder, is worse to-day. He showed some improvement yesterday, but it did not last. His Majesty refuses foreign medical aid or to take foreign medicine.

Public business has been suspended on account of the indisposition of the Dowager Empress.

The death of the Emperor would bring into existence a situation in the empire both serious and complicated. The Emperor is a Manchur, which means that he is regarded practically as a foreigner by his subjects, and his demise would be followed by a strong effort by the anti-Manchu party to suppress the present dynasty and effect the installation of a Chinese ruler. There is to-day no designated heir to the throne.

Many of the victims were drowned, but some were killed while in the water by piratical boatsmen bent on robbery. Five of the pirates have been arrested and will be beheaded.

LIBERAL SHOULD WIN IN PRINCE ALBERT

Big Silent Vote Is Expected to Determine Deferred Election.

(Special to the Times).
Prince Albert, Sask., Nov. 10.—The eve of election in Prince Albert finds both parties confident of victory. The Liberals rely on the progressive administration of the Laurier government and the Hudson's Bay railroad, the terminus of which has been promised to Prince Albert. The opposition are relying solely upon the strength of their candidate, James McKay. Honore Jaxon, the independent in the field, is not taken seriously by either party, and his presence will not affect the result. He left for Duck Lake and Batouche on Monday, where he expects to get his best support.

It is anticipated that Prince Albert city will break about even, and that Mr. Rutan will get a majority in his home county of Kinistino and in the county of Duck Lake. Mr. McKay's strength is in Prince Albert county and city, both of which he should carry. Both parties are putting up a strong fight, but there seems to be a big silent vote this time which may swing with the government. If it does Mr. Rutan will be elected by a good majority.

It is stated that the full Marathon distance, 26 miles and a fraction will be run. Dorando will start for New York on Wednesday on the Teutonic. His brother will be his manager and will look after his training.

VICTORIEN SARDOU IS DEAD IN PARIS

Great French Dramatist Was Widely Known—A Prolific Writer.

Paris, Nov. 10.—Victorien Sardou, who has been ill for a long time, died on Sunday from pulmonary congestion. He was the dean of the French dramatists and a member of the French academy.

The man whose first play was issued and who then wanted to go to America to seek his fortune, died rich and honored, with the proud title of France's greatest and most prolific contemporary dramatist.

Victorien Sardou was a man possessed of singular character, and was greatly beloved, and there is universal regret that he left no memoirs. He was born in Paris on September 13th, 1831, the son of Leonide Sardou, an educationalist and the compiler of several publications. At first he studied medicine, was obliged in consequence of the embarrassment of his family to give private lessons in history, philosophy and mathematics. He also made attempts in literature, writing articles for several reviews and for the minor journals.

OPPOSITION NOW HAS LEAD OF ONE

PARTIES EXPECTED TO TIE IN NEWFOUNDLAND

In Event of Even Break Bond Government May Retain Power.

(Special to the Times).
St. John's, Nfld., Nov. 10.—Burgee and St. George have declared for the opposition, and the parties are now standing at 18 for the opposition and 17 for the government.
St. Borbe is yet to be heard from. At the previous elections St. Borbe returned a government member with a majority of over 200. The herring legislation introduced by Sir Robert Bond, which has been a strong factor in the feeling against the government in St. George and other districts of the colony, will not count so much in St. Borbe, and it can be anticipated that this district will elect a supporter of Sir Robert Bond. If it does the returns will result in a tie. There is a bare possibility that St. Borbe will go to the opposition, but the students of Newfoundland affairs do not think this is likely.

In case of a tie, which Sir Robert Bond is now depending on St. Borbe to make, there will be an interesting political development. The general impression is that the government will manage to retain power. The ministers have all been elected, and the House need not meet till the spring. Changes between the election and the meeting of the legislature have occurred in the past.

HORRORS RELATED BY RUSSIAN FUGITIVE

Comrades Dragged Along Ground by Horses and "Broken to Pieces."

New York, Nov. 10.—The story of a battle between Russian government troops and the militia organized among the Russian people was told on the witness stand yesterday by Jan Lieft, a former neighbor of Jan Pouden, whom the Russian government is seeking to extradite.

Yesterday's proceedings were a continuation of the second hearing of the case. The witness said he first met Pouden in connection with a demonstration against the Russian government. "The next meeting was on the eve of a battle between the rebel militia and several thousand Russian regular troops. Asked why the militia, with which he had been connected, had attacked the government soldiers, the witness replied: 'Because they had taken two of our comrades, tied them to horses and dragged them face downward over the ground.'"

One of these he said was Otto Freiberg. "Did you see the body of Otto Freiberg after he was killed?" asked Herbert Parsons, counsel for Pouden. Although the Russian counsel objected, the witness was permitted to describe the mutilation of Freiberg's body. He also told of five other bodies he had seen at the same time. He said they had been terribly mutilated, or, as he expressed it, "all broken to pieces."

The witness also told of the election of Pouden as an officer of the militia. In relating the incidents in connection with his flight from Russia Jan Lieft told of his hiding in forests in the effort to escape from the government authorities. When counsel for Russia demanded why he had left that country the witness said: "Because the Russian government wanted to hang me or shoot me, and was always after me."

Pressed closely as to the route he had followed to flee, the witness refused to answer, saying that it might prevent others from getting away.

The hearing will be resumed to-day.

EMPEROR KISSES AERONAUT THRICE

Flight of Prince Von Fuerstenburg With Zeppelin Delights His Majesty.

Berlin, Nov. 10.—It was erroneously reported here to-day that the Emperor William had made a successful ascension in the Zeppelin airship this afternoon and the evening editions of the local papers carried detailed descriptions of the reported flight of His Majesty. The explanation of the mistaken report is to be found in the fact that Prince Von Fuerstenburg, who made an ascension with Count Zeppelin, was mistaken by the cheering crowds for His Majesty. The Prince had been the Emperor's traveling companion lately and when he made his ascension to-day he was clad in the same style of hunting dress that the Emperor had been wearing. When the Count returned from his short flight with Prince Von Fuerstenburg he was met by the Emperor, who personally conferred upon him the Order of the Black Eagle. His Majesty hung the chain of the Order around the neck of the Count and then kissed him three times amid the cheering of the assembled crowd.

HUNDRED INJURED IN STUDENTS' RIOT

Pan-German and Jewish Factions in Conflict at Vienna.

Vienna, Nov. 10.—An encounter between two warring factions of students attending the university of Vienna resulted this morning in injury to about 100 of the young men. The cause of the conflict is to be found in the smouldering antagonism between the Pan-German and the Jewish students. The Hebrew students' corporation turned up at the university at an early hour determined to keep the Pan-Germans out, three hundred of them blocking one of the main staircases. The Pan-Germans then stormed the staircase which leads to a balcony. The fighting for a few moments was fierce, but in the midst of it a portion of the balcony collapsed and over 100 students crashed to the ground. Most of them were injured, some seriously.

MOVING PICTURES AT VICTORIA THEATRE

Two Performances Nightly—Reduced Charges for Theatre.

The management of the Victoria theatre will introduce shortly a moving picture programme which will be operated every dark night when the theatre is not otherwise engaged. There will be two performances nightly, and admission will be ten cents. C. Denham has arranged for a supply of films in sufficient quantities to allow of a change of programme every two nights. The pictures, which are to be up to date in every particular, will be supplemented by illustrated songs, and the best of talent will be secured to deliver the vocal part of the programme. The picture machine has already arrived in the city, and is now being installed at the theatre. The management have arranged for a constant supply of new up to date films, and pictures of the best class will be offered to patrons.

While in Seattle Mr. Ricketts and Mr. Denham had a conference with the managers of the Northwest theatrical circuit and entered a protest against the regularity with which the circuit managers charged $1.50 in Victoria for admission to shows which in Seattle are raised at $1. It is understood that both sides of the matter were strongly represented and argued, with the result that there will be a reduction in the price charged patrons at the Victoria theatre.

The city council to-night will hold its regular meeting. Ald. Henderson intends to move that the city make another attempt at the coming session of the legislature to secure the amendment to the Waterworks Act. It is thought that the city may be in a position to develop and sell electric power.

GERMANY IS BEING ISOLATED

DEBATE IN REICHSTAG ON KAISER "INTERVIEW"

Emperor's Utterances Have Stirred Britain to Greater Naval Preparations.

Berlin, Nov. 10.—The indiscretion of Emperor William in having given the interview which was published in the Daily Telegraph of London on Oct. 27th was debated in the Reichstag to-day before a crowded house. Herr Basserman, speaking for the National Liberals said the party did not desire the resignation of Chancellor Von Buelow, but it did want the elimination of personal element from the conduct of foreign affairs and the observance of the provisions of the constitution relating to the interference of the Emperor therein without the co-operation of the chancellor.

Chancellor Von Buelow, who explained the circumstances preceding the Telegraph interview, declared he had decided to remain as chancellor, but he said "I am not young."

The opening of the debate found the chamber fuller than it ever has been before on the occasion of an important debate. All the ministers with the exception of Foreign Secretary Von Schoen, were present. The royal, diplomatic and public galleries were crowded and there was not a vacant seat on the chamber benches.

The interpretation regarding this interview which has been characterized as highly indiscreet, were taken up by Herr Basserman, a National Liberal, who in opening the debate, expressed a hearty desire for the continuance of friendly relations with foreign countries and said he thought that only a small proportion of the German people was unfriendly to Great Britain. The personal element in foreign politics was dangerous, he declared, and the higher a man stood, the greater care he should take of his utterances. Responsible officials should examine their remarks. The National Liberals did not desire the resignation of Chancellor Von Buelow, but they did want the elimination of the personal element from the conduct of foreign affairs as its continuance was bound to bring failure. Great Britain had been stirred to greater naval preparations by the Emperor's utterances, he said, and Germany's relations had become worse with well nigh all the principal powers, but especially with France, Russia, Great Britain and Japan.

Herr Singer, Socialist, declared that Germany had sunk low in the foreign opinion through the incapacity and levity of persons in responsible positions. In the constitutional composition of Germany the Emperor was the first officer of state, and it was the servant of state, he declared, had done such a thing as has Emperor William, he would be brought before an imperial court for trial. The speaker explained that the reference was to the trial for treason of Prof. Geffken, for publishing the diary of Frederick III. Herr Singer was greeted by Socialist applause.

Socialist Demonstration.

Berlin, Nov. 10.—(Earlier).—It is expected that the debate on the Emperor's interview which recently was published in the London Daily Telegraph will be exceedingly lively, probably taking up two days in the Reichstag. Chancellor Von Buelow, it is understood, will make his explanation soon after the opening of the debate. The feeling among the various parties is strong, especially among the Socialists, who have called 20 mass meetings for this evening to protest against "absolutism." Members of other parties in preparation for to-day's interpellation regarding measures that will hereafter prevent similar occurrences, met at the Reichstag yesterday and discussed privately their respective attitudes and nominated speakers to express their views in the debate.

Fields left Vancouver on a train and got off at Cloverdale where he hired a horse and buggy and drove to Blaine, hoping to evade the customs officers, when searched six valuable rings were found in a paper sack in his sock. Fields is wanted in region on similar charge.

MURDER SEEN BY MANY.

Hundreds Pursue Criminal Who is Rescued by Officer.

New York, Nov. 10.—Several hundred employees, many of them young women, to-day witnessed the killing of Francis Emora, by Pietro Disconti, near a factory in Harrison, and instantly pursued the slayer. They quickly captured the man using him roughly when an officer interfered. The crowd surged about the policeman in an attempt to re-take the prisoner. Finally the officer succeeded in getting the man into a baker's wagon and driving swiftly through the crowd, escaped. It was said that the man had quarrelled over a small sum of money.

St. Andrews, N. B., Nov. 10.—Lester Robbins was killed in the woods yesterday afternoon by a rifle in the hands of his father, D. C. Robbins. He asked his father to show him where his brother William killed a moose a few weeks ago. Without any intention of shooting game his father took a rifle along, but in a rough piece of the woods he stumbled and fell. The rifle was discharged, the bullet penetrating the boy's side, causing instant death. The deceased was a bright, studious boy. He won the lieutenant-governor's medal in the high school entrance examination, and was to be presented in a few days. He was an organist in the day schools, and one of the most promising pupils in the Presbyterian Sunday school.

FACES CHARGE OF DEFAUDING JAPANESE

Robert N. McNow is Charged in Police Court—Case Adjourned.

Robert N. McNow, who seems to have been known for a time as George Lewis, appeared in police court this morning to answer a charge of having defrauded H. Hawal, a Douglas street Japanese goods dealer, of $12.50 by means of a cheque. He chose summary trial and was remanded without being arraigned until Thursday.

On Saturday evening a well-dressed man entered Mr. Hawal's store and after looking at some articles purchased a lady's silk waist and a purse worth $6.25, presenting in payment a cheque for $12.50, payable to "George Lewis" and signed "D. W. Spencer & Co." Sometime after his customer had gone Hawal thought it might be well to find out if the cheque was all right, with the result that he discovered it to be a forgery.

Since then Mr. Hawal has had his eyes open for the man and has been watching the outgoing boats. Last evening he was down at the wharf while the Whatcom passengers were going on board and identified McNow as the man. He called Sergeant Redgrave and the man was arrested.

In McNow's satchel was a large policeman's star with the letters "C. P. R." on it, and a letter which would indicate that "George Lewis" had been employed by the company as a special constable during some strike troubles. Other papers showed that he was known by the same name elsewhere. He is a respectable-looking young fellow and well-dressed.

APPEAL DISMISSED.

Bridgman vs. Hepburn is Decided Against the Plaintiff.

A special dispatch from Ottawa to the Times to-day announces that the appeal for Bridgman vs. Hepburn has been dismissed with costs.

This action was first heard before Mr. Justice Irving when judgment was given against the plaintiff who sought $150,000 in damages on the sale of property belonging to the defendant at the corner of Cormorant and Store streets.

An appeal to the full court resulted in the upholding of the judgment of Mr. Justice Irving. The appeal to Ottawa has now resulted in upholding the judgment.

Sunday and a holiday coming together was probably the reason for the unwonted numbers of drunks—six in all—in the police court this morning.

Special evangelistic services will commence to-night in Centennial Methodist Church and will be continued on Wednesday and Thursday evenings. The meetings will begin at eight o'clock and will be conducted by the pastor, Rev. S. J. Thompson. The public are cordially invited.

The monthly medal competition of the Victoria Golf Club was played on the Oak Bay links on Saturday. There were no entries in the ladies' competition. In class A of the men's competition, F. M. Reade won, with 86 minus 8; a score of 78. A. Lindsay was the winner in B class, going around in 57 minus 12, a score of 55. The club will not take any part in the open competitions of the Waverley Golf Club at Port Moody, which open on Saturday. Next year it is hoped to send down a strong team.

THANKSGIVING IN CHURCHES

VARIOUS CONGREGATIONS

OBSERVE THE EVENT

Services Held in Many—Social Events in Others.

In most of the city churches yesterday Thanksgiving Day was fittingly observed. Sunday immediately preceding the day set aside for offering special thanks, in most of the churches Thanksgiving services were held on the Sunday also.

Christ Church Cathedral.

Owing to the fact that improvements are being made to the cathedral, it was impossible to carry out the regular harvest home decorations. The sermon was preached yesterday morning by Bishop Perrin. He referred to his recent visit to the old land and the poverty and distress which was evident detracting from the comfort and happiness of the people. In Canada this subject poverty was by much in evidence which was a cause for thankfulness. The growth of Canada was referred to and stress laid upon the need of high principle in the conduct of the affairs of state. An appeal was made for contributions to the M. S. C. C. to the aid of which the offertory was devoted.

Reformed Episcopal.

The services in the Church of Our Lord yesterday forenoon were of a Thanksgiving character combined with patriotic hymns in honor of the King's birthday.

St. Andrew's Presbyterian.

Rev. Leslie Clay, in his sermon yesterday morning, argued for the maintenance of the religious significance in festivals like Christmas, Good Friday and Thanksgiving. He referred to some of the causes for thankfulness, among them being the bountiful harvest, the social and political benefits. In an industrial way the amicable settlement of the C. P. R. strike was something to feel thankful for. The fact of its being the King's birthday was not forgotten and in concluding the service "God Save the King" was sung.

Tabernacle Baptist.

A very fitting form of thanksgiving was that of the artisan members of the Tabernacle Baptist church, Fort street. The church building, lately completed, was constructed entirely by the men of the congregation. Yesterday about twenty of them started in early on the erection of an addition to the building, for Sunday school purposes, and the work was practically finished when they stopped at 6 o'clock. An appetizing Thanksgiving Day dinner was served then by the ladies of the congregation and was greatly appreciated by the workers.

In the evening the church was filled to take part in a Thanksgiving gathering over which Rev. F. J. Tapscott presided. An impromptu programme was rendered which proved exceedingly enjoyable. Those who took part in this were: Mr. Atkins, violin solo; Miss Ella Cocker, several vocal solos; Mrs. Tapscott, Miss Cocker, J. A. Birnie and Mr. Tapscott, a humorous quartette, "Profundo Basso"; Clifford Spall, a bright little three-year-old, a recitation; J. A. Birnie and E. Mitchell, duet, "Love and War"; Miss Edith Davies, instrumental solo; Misses May and Nellie Davies, duet; A. T. Turner, reading, "A confirmation at Canterbury Cathedral"; Miss S. Blackwell, reading, "A Man of Many Inventions"; Miss Lucy England, recitation, "The Alarm." During the evening addresses were given by Rev. Mr. Tapscott, H. R. Sellick, D. Bragg and A. C. Arnold.

Metropolitan Methodist.

The ladies aid of the Metropolitan Methodist church marked Thanksgiving Day by a social held in the afternoon in the lecture room of the church. Refreshments were served and a pleasant time spent which gave many of the new arrivals in the city an opportunity to become acquainted with the members.

In the evening a programme of music was given. Miss Miller sang "The Star of Bethlehem," and Miss Semsmith, "Good-by, Maureen." While selections were rendered upon the piano by Miss McCarty, a recent graduate of the Boston Conservatory of Music; Miss Ney and Miss Elford.

Refreshments in the form of coffee and cake, were served upon the conclusion of a guessing contest.

First Baptist.

In Victoria hall last evening the congregation of the First Baptist church held a social gathering presided over by Rev. Christopher Burnett.

the pastor. During the evening addresses were delivered by the representatives of the different departments of church work. Alfred Few spoke on the part of the Deacons; W. R. Coleman for the Young People's Society; H. A. Clyde for the Finance committee; A. B. McNeill in the absence of Dr. Russell, for the Sunday school, and J. L. Beckwith for the building committee. Mr. Beckwith gave a sketch of the Baptist church in the province during the evening.

A musical programme was given in which the following took part: Misses Mildred and Edna Middleton, Mr. and Mrs. Parnell, Mrs. Brooks and Mrs. Coughlin.

A thank offering was taken up during the evening amounting to $95, which will go towards the church building fund. Refreshments were served during the evening.

Victoria West.

In Victoria West a union thanksgiving service was held when St. Paul's Presbyterian and the Victoria West Methodist congregations joined in St. Paul's church yesterday morning. Rev. Mr. Macrae, the pastor presided, and the Rev. Mr. Roberts delivered an address. The service was very much enjoyed.

BENCHERS PRESS FOR COURT OF APPEAL

Provincial Government Asked to Bring Act Into Effect.

That the act passed by the legislature creating a court of appeals should be immediately brought into effect by proclamation was the opinion of the Benchers of the Law Society of British Columbia, expressed at a meeting held at the court house on Saturday evening, and a resolution was unanimously adopted calling upon the attorney-general of the province to have this done. As soon as the act is in force it will become the duty of the federal government to appoint four judges and provide for their salaries.

The constitution of legal business in the province and the heavy work entailed on the judges of the supreme court in endeavoring to keep up with it, being well known to the profession, was not discussed at any length, all the benchers present being of one mind. Some other minor matters of business were disposed of.

The benchers present were George E. Corbould, K.C.; Sir Hubert Tupper, K.C.; H. Senkler, K.C.; L. G. McPhillips, K.C.; E. V. Bodwell, K.C.; and H. D. Hellemecken, K.C.

The act which was given the royal assent nearly nineteen months ago, and which the federal government has so far failed to bring into force by a proclamation of the lieutenant-governor-in-council, provides for the constitution of a court of appeal consisting of a chief justice and four puisne justices of appeal. So long as Chief Justice Hunter is head of the supreme court bench the chief of the new court is to be known as chief justice of the court of appeal, but afterwards will be called the Chief Justice of British Columbia, and the successor of the present chief of the lower court will be called Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

All appeals from the supreme court or county courts are to be heard by the new body, which is to have all the power possessed by other appellate courts in Canada and at present exercised here by the judges of the supreme court sitting en banc. Three judges will form a quorum. The sittings are fixed to begin on the first Tuesdays of January and June in Victoria, and on the first Tuesdays of April and November in Vancouver. Special sittings may, of course, be held at any other time in either city.

FREE TRADE IN FORESTRY PRODUCTS

Washington Conservation Congress to Consider the Subject.

The Washington Conservation congress, which meets in Seattle on November 20th and 21st, will discuss the matter of free trade in forestry products. According to a Seattle exchange the reason for their action is the fact that no effort is made by lumbermen to conserve the resources of the state, and particularly the lumbering resources. O. E. Westfall, chief forester for the Washington Forestry Association, has during the past fortnight been ascertaining the sentiments of the members of the Forestry Association, with the result that, at the congress the question of free trade in forestry products will be a leading question.

Mr. Westfall made this statement: "Throughout my travels through the state I have found that lumbermen are absolutely indifferent to the question as to whether or not the forest interests of Washington are conserved. They have expressed themselves, for the most part, as not caring whether the forests are decimated or not. All the majority of them appear to think of is quick sale of timber. Whether large profits accompany these quick sales or not I am not in a position to say.

"As a rule the lumbermen seem desirous of clearing off their lands at the earliest possible moment, realizing on such clearing and getting out of business. This means that timber will be cut and slashed recklessly and that the splendid wealth of the state will be thrown away without another thought, saving for immediate profits."

On the Review Table

JACK LONDON'S NEW BOOK.

Jack London has just written a book of 142,000 words entitled "Martin Eden." The Pacific Monthly has purchased for $7,000 the serial rights for this vivid story. It began in the September number of the Pacific Monthly and will run for twelve months. "Martin Eden" is a character study—the story of a fighter—a fighter as a newsboy in the alleys of San Francisco; a fighter as a rowdy in slums; and finally, a fighter for education and culture, struggling against the odds of common birth and vulgar environment, with a desperate determination of brutality of strength with subtlety of purpose. His inspiration is a woman of the higher sphere of life, but his motive is the mighty impulse that animates a soul and brain-born to expand until fettering ignorance is sundered and ignoble influence trampled under foot. It is not too much to say of "Martin Eden" that it possesses more of fascination and virility, grips the imagination and the sympathies more keenly, and imparts more of courage, than any book produced in years.

CANADA-WEST FOR NOVEMBER.

The November number of Canada-west leads off with an article by Wm. Hard, "Interviewing Canada." Mr. Hard, one of a party of magazine writers and journalists from the States who made a trip through the prairie provinces last August as the guests of Canada-west, and this series of "Interviews" tells how they were impressed. It is a frank and somewhat surprised but graceful appreciation of the country and the people. The "Letters of a Remittance Man to his Mother," by W. H. P. Jarvis, beginning in this number, has not been very widely read, but is bound to attract unusual attention. It shows a familiar line of character in a new and peculiarly candid light. "The Sowing," Emerson Hough's serial on Canadian colonization, is continued, with a liberal instalment. Paul Crissey furnishes "The Rivals," a story of love and rough life in the great north woods. Agnes Deans Cameron, who has but recently returned from an expedition to the mouth of the Mackenzie, contributes an interesting paper on "Placer Mining on Northern Rivers." W. J. Healy has an excellent paper on "The St. Lawrence Grain Outlet," and Dr. Shaller Mathews concludes his series of essays on "Modern Man and the Gospel." There are poems by Cy. Warman, Preston M. Willis and others, an allegory by Samuel E. Kiser, and a variety of other readable things, with many photographs and illustrations throughout. The pictures for the "Remittance Man" are by A. M. Wickson, of Toronto, and the cover design, features that story with a striking picture in colors by C. E. Chambers.

A swallow was conveyed in a cage to London from its home in Cheyney. It flew to its home nest, a distance of 146 miles, in 50 minutes, making the trip at the rate of almost two miles a minute.

There are upward of 70 species of edible seaweeds growing on the coasts of Hawaii, and about 40 of these are in common use by the natives.

DRINKS FROM GAS JETS.
One Way of Evading the Prohibition Law in Maine.

Eben W. Sears, of Lynn, has returned from his vacation at Lewiston, Me., with a remarkable tale of the way liquor is served in the prohibition state. Sears says that a friend took him into a place where several men were drinking and ordered some beer. The room was without furniture or fixtures, save for one table, a few chairs and the gas jets.

While Sears was wondering where the beer was to come from the proprietor stepped to a gas jet and turned it on, whereat the amber fluid flowed forth as from the spout of a keg. The proprietor filled the glasses of Sears and his friend, and then two others for customers drew forth two mugs of ale from another gas jet. After that he produced a glass of whiskey from a gas jet.

Seeing that there were several more gas jets in the room Sears, as a test of the proprietor's resources, was about to call for a martini cocktail when suddenly there were alarms and scurrings without, followed by a noise like a squad of liquor deputies. Instantly the proprietor sprang to a corner and pressed an invisible button. Wondering what the effect of this might be, Sears turned on the beer gas jet, but nothing came forth.

"The gas is shut off," said the proprietor, with a wink. Sears was unable to learn where the liquor came from. He says he thinks the proprietor had tanks in the walls.—Boston Herald.

CAPTAIN COX.

News of the sudden and unexpected death of Captain J. G. Cox will be received with heartfelt regret in Victoria, in other sections of British Columbia in the native province of the late seaman and business man. For many years Captain Cox was one of the best known figures in the streets of the capital of British Columbia. He was a whole-souled, large-hearted, benevolent-minded man, as seafarers are naturally inclined to be. In the circles in which he moved, business and social, the captain's loss will be keenly felt. He occupied a niche which will be difficult to fill. To the late Captain's family and friends sincere sympathy will be generally extended in the day of their deep bereavement.

DEAD SEA FRUIT.

The Colonist is particularly careful to explain that it never had the slightest hope of the government of Sir Wilfrid Laurier being defeated at the general elections. It goes even farther than giving expression to its own private convictions. Our contemporary also intimates that the leader of the opposition, Mr. Borden, shared its views on the matter. The most Mr. Borden hoped for, it says, as a result of the appeal on the 26th of October was a reduction of the Liberal majority in Parliament. The Colonist, for its own glorification, furthermore, asserts that one of the reasons for the disaster which overtook its party was to be found in the character of the campaign decided upon by the men who dictated the Conservative policy. No political party in Canada or anywhere else ever achieved success upon an issue consisting exclusively of scandal. Hence, foreseeing the consequences of a grave Conservative mistake, our contemporary pursued a course of its own devising in the Victoria contest, and beheld the result—the government suffered its only serious reverse, the Minister of Inland Revenue was defeated. And the vain-glorious organ pats itself on the back and asks its readers to consider what might have happened had the Conservative party been led by a political general who knew his business.

Possibly it is to the credit of Leader Borden that he considers retention of self-respect and personal honor of higher importance than a mere party victory. The Colonist need not tell us that its only object in the late campaign was to accomplish the defeat of the Minister of Inland Revenue. Those persons who understand the secret springs by which the organ is actuated fully comprehend that fact, and also what it hopes to gain as a result of all the misrepresentations, misquotations, falsehoods, etc., which it used against the Liberal candidate. It feels that should the Minister be offered, and accept, a seat in some other constituency, retaining his portfolio, its degradation and debasement will have been in vain. Hence it says, speaking for the Minister, that if he cannot represent his own constituency he will not care to sit in Parliament at all. We do not know that the Colonist is authorized to speak for the Minister on this matter, or with authority for anybody or any interest on any public matter. Is it such an unusual thing in the history of Canadian political affairs that a Minister should be defeated, and, having been defeated, should be offered and accept a seat in another constituency? Sir John Macdonald was defeated in Kingston and sat for Victoria for a whole Parliamentary term. Mr. Borden went down in Halifax four years ago and was accommodated by the constituency of Carleton, Ont. These leaders of the Conservative party, apparently, did not consider the fact of their defeat by larger majorities than the Minister of Inland Revenue was buried under in Victoria implied that their usefulness as public men was at an end.

But it may be said Sir John Macdonald and Mr. Borden were leaders whose services were indispensable to the people of Canada. Well, other men may be cited, but Sir John Macdonald, who for twelve years has been the Prime Minister of Canada, entered the House of Commons in 1874, and after the riding of Drummond and Arthurs, Quebec, He was chosen Minister of Inland Revenue by Hon. Alexander Mackenzie shortly after, and on going back to his constituency for re-election as a result of taking office under the Crown, was defeated by a candidate named Bourbeau, the majority against him being forty. Mr. Mackenzie did not assume that the defeat of his Minister meant permanent retirement. He found a seat for his colleague in Quebec East, a constituency Sir Wilfrid Laurier has represented ever since.

Sir Richard Cartwright has probably had more ups and downs in the course of his career than any other Canadian political notable. Yet the chiefs of the Liberal party invariably stood by the knight from Frontenac, and it can be said without exaggeration that few public men have rendered their country greater service. The cases of many other ministers in various governments, federal and provincial, might be cited. It is a common thing for administrations to suffer ministerial losses in general elections, and it is the exception, not the rule, for the chiefs of administrations to suffer their colleagues to retire into private life on account of these mishaps.

The transparent fact that the Colonist is particularly anxious, for reasons which are well understood by those "on the inside," for the retirement of the Minister of Inland Revenue, constitutes the very strongest reason, from the point of view of all who wish Victoria well, why Mr. Templeman should remain at his post. Furthermore, it is a matter which is for the Minister himself to determine. That much may be said without attempting to derogate in the slightest degree from the authority generally exercised by the Prime Minister in such cases. Sir Wilfrid, we may be sure, thoroughly understands the circumstances under which his Minister went down to defeat in Victoria. He comprehends the part the policy of the government—a policy future events will vindicate as for the general advantage of the country at large and for British Columbia also—and the tactics of the opposition played in producing the result. He will act in accordance with these facts. And his action will be in complete accord with his reputation and absolutely satisfactory to the Minister of Inland Revenue and his friends.

DOES NOT AGREE WITH MILNER.

Lord Milner, who has just completed a tour of investigation in Canada for his own private edification and possibly with a view to future political activities, addressed many gatherings in the course of his pilgrimage. His Lordship's views on public questions, while carefully edited, left no doubt in the minds of his hearers as to their ultimate object. He stands for the unification of the Empire upon a basis of mutual preference in trade and mutual action for protection against an aggressive combination of antagonistic nations. He entertains no doubts whatever as to the final outcome of the political situation in the United Kingdom. He maintains that if every other issue were eliminated as between the rival political parties in Great Britain, the one sole issue of tariff reform with a preference for the Colonies would prove triumphant in a general election. Lord Milner believes that such an issue must finally be put to the test of public opinion and that the Conservative opposition will gain power upon it.

That is not the view of another eminent Briton now paying a visit to Canada, a Briton who is possibly also an Imperialist as well as a practical man of affairs. Mr. Hirst, editor of the London Economist, one of the most influential financial and commercial authorities published in Great Britain. Speaking to a reporter of the Toronto Globe recently Mr. Hirst said: "It might seem presumptuous on my part to express an opinion which does not agree with that of Lord Milner, but in some ways I have had better opportunities of judging than he has. Lord Milner has not been much in England for many years, and he is also a member of the House of Lords. It is very difficult for a man who has come comparatively recently from South Africa, and who sees politics from the seclusion of the House of Lords, to judge popular feeling. Quite briefly, the fact is that the present Liberal government, like all governments, is suffering from the effects of trade depression, and it has been doing rather badly at the bye-elections. On the other hand, at most of the bye-elections there has been a majority for free trade, and in some of them the Conservative candidate himself has been practically a free trader. Lord Milner says that if all other issues could be cleared away there would be a majority for preference. I do not agree, and cannot imagine how he arrives at his conclusion. I will just point out two facts: The first is that since Mr. Chamberlain's retirement the tariff reform movement has been converted from an Imperial preference movement into a movement for pure, naked and unabashed protection. The tariff reformers themselves now propose that duties should be put on every article coming into Great Britain which is or can be produced in Great Britain, in order, as they say, to encourage home industries, and they argue that when the colonies begin to feel the pinch we shall be able to bargain with them at an advantage. The position would be, if the tariff reformers succeeded, that the great Canadian exports, wheat, cheese and lumber, as well as minor products, would all be taxed, and, of course, our market for them would be reduced very much. That would lead not to the cementing of the empire, but more probably to the breaking up of it through commercial bad feeling. The second fact is that there is no party in Great Britain which is in any way committed to the policy called tariff reform. I have no doubt in my own mind that Mr. Balfour himself is one of the 'intellectual and logical' free traders to whom Lord Milner referred, and it is extremely doubtful whether, with the exception of Mr. Bonar Law and Lord Milner himself, the tariff reform movement has captured a single path of real ability and political aptitude. There is a growing reluctance among the leaders of the Conservative party to base their platform on tariff reform. Every effort is being made by them to divert the attention of the country to the licensing question, education, military and naval policy and other subjects on which they think they have a better chance of being returned to power."

Mr. Hirst is inclined to think that a trade revival has commenced in Great Britain, which will continue, providing that there is no setback caused by foreign complications or serious banking trouble. He pointed out that all over the world in the last twelve months there has been a series of bank failures and financial disasters. "There are signs of improvement," he said, "and I hope the Canadian harvest will give a turn to things here. Nothing is really so important for the world as that there should be abundant harvests, because then the price of food will be cheaper, and the working classes all over the world, who are the important people from this point of view, have a larger margin for the purchase of boots and clothing and of the secondary necessities of life. It means the difference between the mills of the world running full time and overtime and running half time or stopping altogether." The excellent sense in Canada Mr. Hirst thought would have a good effect on immigration, but the best advertisement for Canada are the reports sent home by people who have done well in the country.

His Majesty the Kaiser is to make a trip in Count Zeppelin's airship. William loves sensations. Let us hope this new pastime may divert his mind from a propensity for creating sensations which might prove mischievous. But while giving his Majesty the fullest credit for his personal courage, the fact ought to be taken into consideration by his advisers that air navigation is an extremely hazardous occupation, involving as great danger to his person as interference in politics is menacing to the peace of the world.

Although the term is but half over, nine persons have been killed in the Maine woods thus far during the present shooting season. A considerable number have been seriously wounded in addition. Each year the casualty list increases. Very soon the shooting mortality in the United States will make more melancholy reading than the Fourth of July returns.

The general elections in Newfoundland have practically resulted in a tie. Probably the Bond government will have but little difficulty in cutting the knot.

No, no; the one thing Canada has most reason to be thankful for is an absolute assurance of good government for another five years.

WHY DISCRIMINATE AGAINST ENGINEERS?

To the Editor:—To those of us who are marine men perhaps the most interesting of the many photos among the splendid collection on exhibition in the city hall are those of the pioneer steamers of British Columbia and the men who commanded them, "The Pioneer Navigators." But surely, sir, while acknowledging their indebtedness to the pioneer navigators, those who are responsible for the collection would only have been doing a graceful act had they included the "Pioneer Engineers," the men who drove these steamers to their destination through fair weather and foul, with, in many cases, engines and boilers which now would be considered fit for the scrap heap. Although the engineer is not in evidence quite as much as the commander, and although, as Kipling makes one of his characters remark about General "Bobs," "It doesn't advertise," still, we submit, that the photos of such men as Ben Madigan, Dave Stevens, Pat Hickey, Bill Somerville, Roderick McIvor, Jimmie McArthur, Dave Kennedy (Jack) and others would not have looked out of place among those on exhibition.

COMMISSIONER COOMBS WILL ARRIVE TO-NIGHT

Head of Salvation Army in Canada Will Give Celebrated Lecture.

Commissioner Coombs, the "mild" head of the Salvation Army for Canada, will arrive in Victoria to-night and will be accompanied by Mrs. Coombs, Colonel Pugmire, secretary for the army's prison work in the Dominion, and Staff-Captain A. Morris, Commissioner Coombs' private secretary.

The commissioner will deliver an illustrated lecture entitled "Bethlehem to Calvary" in the A. O. U. W. hall this evening. This lecture has been given in the Massey hall, in Toronto, and repeated by special request. The views consist of 2,000 feet of moving pictures of the life of Christ, produced at a cost of over $10,000; also a series of lime-light views of such celebrated artists as Tinsot, Hoffman, Holman, Hunt and others. Colonel Pugmire will assist in this service.

Staff-Captain Hayes, the officer in charge of the local corps, is expecting a large crowd.

Tickets are on sale at Hall's drug store.

While in Victoria Commissioner Coombs will further the arrangements for the alteration and renovation of the army hall on Broad street, plans for which are now being prepared.

ANOTHER ESCAPE

Frank Orr Has Again Obtained His Liberty—Was on Way to Serve Sentence.

Frank Orr, who escaped from the police cells here a few weeks ago so cleverly as to leave no trace of how he had got away or how he had eluded the guards, made another escape on Thursday. From here he went to Seattle and then to Tacoma, where he was arrested for robbing branch post offices. He was sentenced to fourteen years in Walla Walla penitentiary, and was being taken there along with other prisoners in charge of several armed guards. Orr slipped his hand out of the handcuff by which he was fettered to another prisoner, jumped from the moving train and disappeared in the woods. The whole thing happened so quickly that Orr had got out of sight before the guards recovered from their astonishment. No trace of him has been seen since.

The Tacoma police found that Orr had already served four years in San Quentin penitentiary, and there is reason to believe that he had been in Walla Walla before that under another name. During his residence in Victoria he was employed by the Hinton Electric Company, and was awaiting trial on a charge of stealing a quantity of electric light fixtures when he got away.

HUNTING WITH DOGS.

Reports Brought in That Illegal Practices Are Being Followed.

Several reports have reached the Times this morning of the practice of hunting deer with dogs during the holidays. All are in the nature of protests against the common practice, which has been engaged in through the week end in several districts. Two reports are from Sooke and Goldstream, and are brought in by well known sportsmen.

During the week end there were many sportmen out. Last night's train brought in a crowd returning after the week end shoot, and there were several fair bags among them. Good bags were obtained in the Sooke district, and one large bag was secured in the Cedar Hill neighborhood. The bag numbered thirty brace, and was the result of two days' shooting.

The funeral of the late George Williams took place yesterday morning at 9 o'clock from the residence of his son-in-law, Sidney, and at 10.30 o'clock at the Roman Catholic church at Saanich Arm. Interment took place at the Mission cemetery. Rev. Father Vullings officiated. The following acted as pallbearers: T. Flecher, N. Butler, T. Montowite and H. Fainbello.

The death occurred on Sunday afternoon at the residence, near the Four Mile house, of George Welsh. He was a native of Hipsalton, Eng., a pioneer of British Columbia and this city, having come here at the time of the Fraser river gold rush. During his latter years he was caretaker of the Esquimalt water works. One son only survives him. The funeral will take place on Thursday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock from the B. C. Funeral Furnishing Company's parlors.

VICTORIA WINS TWO STRAIGHT DEFEATED NANAIMO AND VANCOUVER All Five Teams in Pacific Coast League Are Now Equal.

Club Standing.

	P. W. L. Pts.
Victoria	4 2 2 4
Vancouver	4 2 2 4
Nanaimo	4 2 2 4
Ladysmith	4 2 2 4
Seattle	4 2 2 4

On Saturday Victoria, which had previously lost two games in the Pacific Coast League, won from Nanaimo in a whirlwind finish by 4 goals to 3, and again yesterday Victoria beat Vancouver, Nanaimo during the holidays went to Seattle and met defeat at two to one, and the tally of the five clubs is now equal, all having won and lost two games.

The game at Oak Bay yesterday at one stage looked like Victoria, being left a point behind with a drawn game on their hands. A draw yesterday meant that one point would have been added to Vancouver's tally, putting that team in the lead by one point, with Victoria one point to the bad behind the other four teams. They have now all won two games and lost two games. Victoria has not yet played Seattle, and is due to play that team here on December 13th. The date of the return game with Vancouver is not selected yet, and may be chosen prior to that date. Meantime Victoria, with the public interest heartily aroused in her chances for the Pacific Coast League championship, and from this out surge of drawing good games, will return to the Victoria and District League schedule next Saturday.

Victoria beat Vancouver 3-0.
The teams: Victoria—Goal, Beane; full backs, Lorimer and Prevost; half backs, Petticrew, Elton, Telford; forwards, O'Keil, Sheritt, Sedger, Thomas and Buxton.

Vancouver—Goal, Horn; full backs, McLean and Scott; half backs, Knowles, Strang and Forrest; forwards, Shallock, Anderson, Vane, Robertson and Nason.
For eighty minutes yesterday at Oak Bay, Victoria played away at Horn, McLean and Scott, Vancouver's backs, before they could work in that happy combination which was finally, in the last ten minutes, responsible for three goals and victory in their fourth P. C. L. match. Eighty minutes of the hardest kind of play was made up of constant attack on the Vancouver goal, which was rebuffed again and again by the splendid defence which Vancouver brought from the Terminal City. Those backs, however, and Scott in particular, were tricky, and five times straight in the first half fooled Buxton into an off side trap by running down the ground and passing the Garrison wing man as he and the ball came up. The second half, however, Buxton, avoided the trap and waited, with the result that he was responsible for notching the three goals scored. Victoria has a whirlwind finish which the team had been keeping locked up until Saturday. The pace set them by Vancouver at the opening yesterday and by Nanaimo on Saturday was about as fast as soccer can be played. Yesterday's game was the fastest and the cleaner of the two. Vancouver and Nanaimo both received a big surprise after roughing it with the light local team, to find them at the finish faster than at the beginning. Yesterday 15 minutes before time the pace began to show on the Vancouver men, and they knew it by a better team. Victoria has two splendid wing men in Buxton and Thomas, two fine backs in Lorimer and Prevost. Their halves, however, might be stronger, and the right wing a trifle heavier, with which alterations they have the Pacific Coast championship fairly well tucked away this season.

Of yesterday's game the play of McLean, formerly of Calgary, and reputed as one of the best backs in British Columbia, was badly spoiled by the rough tactics he used on his opponent, Sedger. Strang, of the Vancouver team, also spoiled a fine exhibition by the same style of play. Victoria played a cleaner and faster game, and secured a well deserved win. Buxton was without doubt the best and fastest man on the ground. He scored three goals. He was admirably seconded by Thomas, while Prevost, besides being clever and resourceful, was sure, and was always there when wanted. Sam Lorimer—well everybody knows Sam. He always does a trifle more than his share. Beane in goal shivered with the cold in the second half, and constantly, but in the first half he saved a few likely looking passages. Of the others Petticrew was the best, and if anything was an improvement on Kerchin, owing to his greater weight. Kerchin was in the team, it being the same as beat Nanaimo, but he arrived on the ground a few minutes late, and his place was taken by Petticrew. Telford, Sheritt and O'Keil are light, and were against heavy men, but sedger on the forward line, when not preparing to rebut rough attacks from McLean, who invariably played the man and not the ball, was there with the goods every time, and put in some fine rushes which more than once had the goalkeeper in difficulties. Elton, while having plenty of weight, missed more than one opportunity, and several times was slow on the ball, otherwise he played up to first team class.

Victoria has a good team, which, with a little skillful handling and a little more balancing, will win the Pacific Coast championship.

Alexander Lockley as referee was fair and impartial, and kept the play well in hand. He satisfied the spectators and the Vancouver and Victoria teams. He did his best to keep the play clean and free from roughness, and succeeded well.

Victoria 4; Nanaimo 3.
In one of the greatest whirlwind finishes ever seen on Vancouver Island, Victoria defeated Nanaimo in the Pacific Coast League on Saturday by four goals to three, and of the score registered put on all their goals in the last half and the final three in twelve minutes before time. The local men ran Nanaimo off their legs and won their first match in the new league amid intense excitement.

Throughout the first half, although Nanaimo scored three goals and kept the locals from scoring, the winners nevertheless had the best of the play and failed in so far as they lacked initiative at the critical moment in front of goal. Buxton in one instance instead of rushing the goal-keeper through the net when that sterling player had the ball in his arms, attempted to kick the ball and the goal was scored. Two other easy chances were missed.

In the second half Victoria came with a rush and wore down their opponents in a few minutes and scored their first goal. Twelve minutes before time Victoria scored their second goal, Mitchell, for Nanaimo, shortly after shot the ball across the Victoria goal, and Prevost took it up the wing, from where O'Keil centred, and in a mix-up in front, the ball was rushed through. There was more cheering for Victoria had tied with the pride of the Coast City. Nanaimo made a tremendous effort to score the necessary point to win the match, but again Sam Lorimer, Kerchin and Prevost proved invincible, and the ball went up the centre. Buxton put in some fine work and the ball was again rushed through. The referee, however, decided he has blown his whistle for a penalty kick just prior to the ball going into the net, and Prevost was given the duty of scoring the deciding goal. He beat Rogers, who failed to stop the low kick which recorded Victoria's first win in the new league. Cheering and shouting followed, and before either side could make any further impression the final whistle had blown. The rulings of Rose of Seattle, who acted as referee, failed to give satisfaction to Nanaimo, Victoria or to the spectators.

Of the players, Sam Lorimer, Prevost and Kerchin, on the back line, played superlative football against three worthy opponents in Blundell, Mitchell and Cruickshanks. On the forward line Buxton played the best game on the ground and was ably supported by Thomas and Sedger. The latter, however, was off in the first half, but for the second put in splendid work. Of the other Victoria players all were about equal. Nanaimo made the game a rough one several times, and succeeded in making it too rough for themselves. They were more out of themselves than they did out of the light Victoria team, and at the finish were completely run off their feet. At the start the betting was five to one on Nanaimo and at half time there was no Victoria money at any price. The Victoria team is light but fast. Their system, however, was not up to that of the visitors, who in the first half seldom made a mistake and played some of the prettiest soccer ever seen here. Their passing all over the ground was admirable. Victoria learned how to do it, and in the second half did it well.

Seattle 2; Nanaimo 1.
The Seattle United team defeated the Nanaimo team at Durdale's park. Seattle in an exciting game, by a score of two goals to one.

Seattle was defeated several weeks ago at Nanaimo by the Nanaimo team, by the score of nine to one, but the Seattle team showed a great reversal of form and won the last game by a single goal.

Stalker made the first goal just before half time for Seattle. Hooper scored for Nanaimo after half time, but Seattle won when Cornthwaite scored near the close of the game on a pass from Stewart.

THE RING.

LANG NO QUIETER, SAYS BURNS.
Tommy Burns, who went down for the count of nine in his recent fight with Bill Lang at Melbourne, Australia, has the following to say of Lang in a recent exchange:

"I don't know when I hurt my wrist. I think I hit it against Lang's head. Oh, yes, I won easily enough, but you can say for me that Lang is a good game fighter, and he can punch. A man that wasn't game would have gone out earlier. Lang took a lot of punishment. Yes, he got me fair on the chin in the second round when I went down. "I half slipped at the moment, and that helped him. I could have been up quicker than I was—but not me, sir. Some guys like to jump up in two seconds to show how good and game they are. I take the count. I'm not too proud to fall down. That was the first time I've been knocked down since I have been champion of the world. Your Lang has got that to his credit. I had to go out after him, though. He wouldn't come at me when I backed away and tried to make him come on. There was only one way to fight him. But I think I deluded him later on. Do you remember when he was knocking me out on both jaws in the sixth round? You saw me laughing? Well, I had him there. You've got to use your head as well as your hands in this game."

"More fighting? No more work for me for two months, anyhow. I've been working now for nine months on end, fighting and giving theatrical displays, and to finish up with I have fought two world's championship battles in ten days. I think I've earned a spell, and I will take a rest in the mountains. I want to say this—I've heard about Lang being a quitter, but don't you listen to it. He's all right. A match between him and Squires would be great—yes, a great fight."

MORTIMER VS. MCNAMEE.

Mortimer and McNamee have now met for the second time next at the A. O. U. W. hall at 9 p. m. for a twenty-round bout. Forfeits were paid. As the teams have not yet submitted entries for the season the date for so doing was set over till next Saturday. A. J. Brace was elected president, D. O'Sullivan vice-president; D. Christopher, secretary, and K. Hughes, treasurer.

CHANDLER FIRST IN THE GOLD SEAL RACE

Baylis, After Hard Tussle With Hall, Finished Fourth.

With W. T. Stand in the London Mail. The Wright brothers have done a great deal of work in preparing the public to accept the aeroplane, or the motor-driven flying machine, as a practical proposition, but they have not done more than that. They have shown that the thing can be done, and they have not quite succeeded in showing how to do it. The coming aeroplane, however, is only building, and will not probably be ready to take its initial flight until nearly the end of the month (October). It is at present in process of construction by the Voisin brothers in Paris, who have built many aeroplanes, but who declare with conviction that this latest is the best of all. So good, indeed, that if it succeeds in doing even half of what is claimed for it, it will put the science of aviation upon a firm practical footing. The coming aeroplane is the invention of a young Russian nobleman, Prince Serge de Boloff, the eldest son of Princess Wladimir, a representative of one of the oldest, if not the oldest, princely families in Russia. M. de Boloff invented this aeroplane three years ago, but he has since perfected its details till now he is quite satisfied that when Messrs. Voisin brothers have fulfilled their contract, he will have in his possession an aeroplane which will not merely break all records and win outstanding prizes to which he attaches comparatively small importance, but will prove to the world that it is possible to navigate the air safely and swiftly. Prince's Many Inventions. Almost from his infancy M. de Boloff has displayed an extraordinary genius for all kinds of mechanical inventions, especially those in relation to aeroplanes and motors. Among his devices are a kite for the purpose of registering wind pressures, a mechanical gliding boat, a submarine boat, a multiplex instrument, which is in use in many telegraph offices, a wireless telephone, a change-speed lever for motor cars, and a tank stopper for facilitating the filling of reservoirs of petrol carried on racing cars. M. de Boloff was only twenty-one years of age last July. He had never had any technical engineering education, which makes all the more remarkable the phenomenal ability which he displays in the designing of the machines which embody his ideas. But it is the aeroplane which is likely to make the name of Boloff famous throughout the world. This machine, which is entered for the cross-Channel competition, differs from all the other aeroplanes in having three planes instead of two, and that it is driven by a motor-engine of 100 nominal h.p. The difficulty with most of the aeroplanes is that the light motors used could never be relied upon for a long continuous run. The motor engine which is mounted upon the Boloff aeroplane is a 100 h. p. Panhard, which, before it was dedicated to the aerial service, ran without a hitch or a stoppage, other than those necessitated for taking in fresh supplies of petrol, for two 800-mile runs along the public road. It is also identical with the motor used on the boat which won all the prizes last year at Monaco. Mechanical Bird. In addition to possessing three planes instead of two, and being driven by a motor, twice as powerful as any that has ever been used on an aeroplane, the machine has a more important peculiarity in that, judging by the behavior of the model, it is self-righting, and, even if anything happened to the machine, instead of dropping to the ground like a wounded bird, the driver could bring it down with perfect safety. The Boloff aeroplane represents the body of a bird thirty-three feet long from the tail to the tip. Its wings extend from tip to tip twenty-one feet, and are six feet in breadth. As there are three planes this gives three times its equivalent to one pair of wings of three times the stretch from tip to tip. The two top planes are horizontal, the bottom plane is curved. The distance from the top to bottom is nine feet. The body of this mechanical bird rests upon two wheels in front and one behind, raising it three feet above the ground, so that it can start from any level surface. It is driven by a single screw measuring eight feet from tip to tip. This screw is in front of the aeroplane. The motor stands in the centre of the plane, and is driven by the aviator, exactly as a chauffeur drives a motor-car. The only difference is that his steering apparatus has to provide for rising and falling, as well as for turning to the right or left. At the extreme end of the tail finages are fixed about six feet by nine above this rises the double rudder. It is also connected with the third steering wheel. The second passenger sits behind the driver. The body of the bird is built in watertight compartments filled with india-rubber air bags, capable of supporting eleven tons in the water. The total weight of the Boloff aeroplane will be about three-quarters of a ton when it is carrying two persons and full allowance of petrol. When driven at full speed it will obtain a speed of fifty-five miles an hour in calm. With the wind at twenty-five miles an hour its speed will be eighty miles an hour. This speed is, of course, when it is driven, but aeroplanes, like birds, will achieve their greatest speed when the machine

RIVAL TO THE WRIGHT AEROPLANE

MECHANICAL BIRD INVENTED BY A PRINCE.

SPORTING NOTES.

Cadets Shoot at Clover Point—Sanford Rugby Team Defeats Vancouver.

The following were the best scores in the cadets' shoot at Clover Point on Saturday morning at 200 yards out of a possible 35: Sergt. Shopland 25, L. C. Hanna 25, Cadets H. Boggis 24, Elford 22, Elliott 21, Capt. Hartman 19, McDougall 19, Robinson 19, Stuart 19, Lieut. Wellwood 18, Cadet Myers 18.

Victoria Rugby players to the number of sixteen, out of the long list of sixty registered, turned out on Saturday for practice. Of these three were injured severely and carried from the field. The game was a scratch affair and the whistle used by the referee several times confused the players engaged in the P. C. L. soccer game against Nanaimo.

Beacon Hill defeated the High school in the soccer match on Saturday at Beacon Hill by four goals to three. At the call of time the score was a tie and the teams agreed to play twenty minutes extra, in which the Hill men scored the odd goal.

The hockey players were out Saturday getting ready for their game against Seattle at Oak Bay next Saturday. A full turn-out was present and useful practice obtained.

Stanford Rugby team beat Vancouver in the final match Saturday by eleven to three. There were four games played by the Vancouver team in the south, resulting in two wins, one draw and one defeat.

Sam Goodman, secretary of the California Association Football League, has written to the Vancouver league secretary announcing that a team from the south will probably tour the Northwest about the beginning of the new year. The letter has been turned over to Will Ellis, secretary of the Pacific Coast League, and it is probable that the schedule will be fixed.

Wade, the Nova Scotia shusher and long distance runner, wants a match with Shrubbs. He has written to S. P. Johnston, of Vancouver, asking him to arrange a match with the English professional. He asks for twenty-five miles as the shortest distance.

The North Ward juniors went to Nanaimo yesterday and won from the local City juniors by two to one, after a close game which was also a rough one at the commencement. The team returned to town last night.

The J. B. A. A. team beat Baraca at the Royal ground yesterday morning by 4-1. The Bays played Bernie Schwengers as a second division man. Schwengers was responsible for some of the goals. He will turn out with the team in form will add strength to that side. Jim Lorimer and Shanks, first grade men, were also on the Bays' team. The game was a friendly one.

There was a poor Rugby exhibition again at Oak Bay yesterday morning when two scratch teams got out for practice. The attendance Saturday afternoon numbered sixteen, and yesterday morning there were very few more in evidence when the game was called.

The first Rugby game in the city championship will be played at Oak Bay Saturday between the Bays and the city team. Leo Sweeney announces a practice of the Bays to-night and Thursday night at 7.30 at the J. B. A. A. rooms.

The first basketball game this year was played yesterday at Institute hall between the Shamrocks and the High school, the former winning the game by 21 to 15.

Cross-Channel Flight. There are two reservoirs for petrol, the first of which holds 150 litres (thirty-three gallons), and as the rate of consumption when the aeroplane is going at full speed is only forty-five litres per hour the Boloff aeroplane can keep in the air for three hours and still have a quarter of an hour's supply in hand.

One of the many disadvantages of the Wright aeroplane is that it cannot start from anywhere or descend anywhere. The Boloff aeroplane can start from any smooth open space from which it can get a hundred yards run, and in the same way it can descend where it pleases. Very few people have seen this machine, but those experts who have been privileged to examine it, among whom was a representative of the Italian government, are full of admiration at the extraordinary way in which all imaginable difficulties have been foreseen and provided against.

All being well, M. de Boloff hopes to make the passage from Calais to Dover in the course of the next fortnight.

RUSSIAN VILLAGE FIRES.

Edict by which a Governor Hoped to End Loss of Life and Property.

The present is the season of village conflagrations which annually destroy thousands of the peasants' wooden houses, and besides ruining whole communities involve no small loss of life. Given the intense heat which renders the wooden hovel inflammable as touchwood at the end of summer, and the inevitable custom of every village that the able-bodied of both sexes spend all the hours of daylight in the fields gathering in the harvest, it would seem that nothing can be done to put an end to this terrible scourge. Children and the helpless aged are locked up or locked out, as the case may be, for the entire day, and are left to shift for themselves. If one hovel takes fire nothing can save the whole village. The zemstvos have been fighting for a generation with this danger by the rational method of assisting peasants to roof their hovels with iron instead of straw, establish fire brigades, etc., but the process is a slow one.

Much amusement is being caused by an administrative attempt to deal with the evil in the good old way. The governor of Poltava has issued a fiat that any peasant leaving children without supervision shall be fined 120 (which is three times the average amount of annual taxation, collected with so much difficulty from an impoverished class) or be imprisoned for three months. The "administrative order" issued under the provisions of martial law, is typical of much that is being done by incompetent provincial governors without the sanction and too frequently without the knowledge of their central organs of government. As is pointed out, if no fire occurs not one case in 10,000 of children being left alone at home will ever come to light, and in any case the harvest must be garnered, and can only be garnered by every able-bodied man and woman working sixteen and eighteen hours a day in the fields, which may be anything from one mile to ten miles away from their homes—London Standard.

GREAT ENGINEERING FEAT.

A unique engineering feat was accomplished successfully at Sunderland, when the heaviest independent span for a bridge was completed over the River Wear some days ago. This bridge has two decks, the upper carrying the North-Eastern Railway and the lower the public roadway. The weight is over three times that of the Forth Bridge—central girders. The problem set for the builders, Sir William Arrol & Co., Glasgow, was to construct in position this immense bridge span without interfering with the river traffic. The bridge is, with its approach, one and three-quarter mile long, and has cost about $2,500,000. The foundations are of themselves of great depth. Like those of the Forth Bridge, they consist of great steel boxes, 63 feet long by 35 feet wide, and were sunk by air-pressure to a depth of 55 feet below high water. The bridge is a fine example of the art of the engineer, and the structure is a masterpiece of modern engineering.

PRINCESS ROYAL IN COLLISION

JAPANESE STEAMER RAMMED AMIDSHIP

Some Excitement But All Damage Can Be Repaired in a Week.

The C.P.R. steamer Princess Royal had the misfortune to ram the Japanese steamer Fukui Maru on Sunday morning when leaving Vancouver harbor on her way to this port with a large cargo of passengers. The result was that the Royal injured her stem very badly so that it has to be replaced, and several new planks have to be put in. She is at present on the dock at the B. C. Marine Railway and it is estimated that it will take about a week to repair her.

The Fukui Maru was swinging at anchor in Vancouver Harbor and had been in the same position about a week. It is probable that she was in the fairway but the harbor master had apparently been satisfied with her position. She was ringing a bell on her bow but it seems not to have been heard by the Royal.

When the Princess Royal pulled off from the dock she had 75 passengers aboard and she crept slowly out through the thick fog. Suddenly about two hundred feet distant the Japanese steamer was seen and orders were quickly given to reverse her engines. The order came too late for the C.P.R. steamer went crashing into the freighter. She struck a glancing blow almost amidships and this fact probably saved both vessels.

Naturally, there was much excitement. Some of the passengers on the Royal rushed for lifeboats, but on the whole good order prevailed. On the Japanese ship a marvelous thing occurred. Within thirty seconds of the accident the first officer of the Japanese steamer was swinging over the side and examining the injury to the vessel. A few seconds later he had reported to the Captain and almost before Captain Hickey of the Royal had time to turn round the Japanese was aboard and saluting him with a bow so serious damage had been done.

The Princess Royal lacked into her place at the dock and a canvas tarp was put over the injured part. While she was considered perfectly safe it was thought better that the passengers should wait and come over on the Charmer which they did, the Princess Royal following and not losing sight of her during the trip.

The Fukui Maru has several damaged plates but did not take any water. She was heavily laden at the time of the collision and offered a serious resistance to the passenger craft. She was just preparing to weigh anchor with the purpose of leaving the harbor when the accident happened.

HALEWOOD ARRIVES.

After Long Trip British Ship Makes Port This Morning.

Ships Halewood and Arranmore arrived in Royal Roads this afternoon, the former from Panama and the latter from South American ports. The Halewood has had a very long trip, being something like 110 days out. She is a slow steamer, and on the account was not given up, but everyone interested in her had begun to get uneasy. She is owned by the Leland Shipping Company and is in command of Captain Brew. She is in ballast from Panama, and so far has not been chartered. R. P. Ritchie & Co. are her agents in this port.

ENLARGING FLEET.

Yusen Kaisha Steamer Ateuta Maru Will Be Launched Next Month.

According to advices brought on the Empress of India the Yusen Kaisha's new steamer Ateuta Maru will be launched on December 21st from the Mitsui Bishi shipbuilding yard at Nagasaki. She is built of steel and is 465 feet in length, 36 feet beam, and 45 feet 6 inches in depth. Her gross tonnage is 5,600, and her displacement 5,750 tons. She has triple screws with 7,300 horsepower, her designed speed being 16 knots.

EXCEEDS CONTRACT SPEED.

New Turbine Steamer Chiyu Maru.

Left for Seattle at 8 a. m.

and returned at 3 p. m., after having most successfully performed her full speed trials. Although the contract speed is 19 knots, which would put her in the front rank of Pacific liners, the mean speed of the vessel for 3 consecutive runs over the measured distance—about three and one-third knots—was 20.66 knots an hour. The speed of the vessel was 21.1 knots. The Chiyu Maru, a sister ship, developed a mean speed of 20.66 knots on her official trials, the highest speed attained being 20.95 knots, so that the Chiyu Maru's performance was slightly better. The time occupied by the Chiyu Maru in stopping from full speed ahead was 3 minutes, 45 seconds, and she completed a round turn in five minutes, the vessel keeping steady when turning at full speed.

NOTICE TO MARINERS.

The following notices to mariners have been issued by the department of marine and fisheries:

The diaphane at Estevan point will in future give blasts of five seconds' duration, with intervals of fifty-five seconds between them, or one five-second blast a minute. A day beacon, probably established by the proprietors of the cannery in the inlet, exists on the extremity of James point, on the west side of the entrance to Lowe inlet. Lat. N. 49 deg. 35 min. 20 sec.; long. W. 120 deg. 25 min. 45 sec. It is roughly made of boards fastened as a slatwork to a frame standing just above high water mark, and is colored white. The cannery is situated on the northwest shore of Nettle basin; the large buildings are visible from Grenville channel. There is a wharf at the cannery.

The following notices are compiled from a recent inspection of Bela Kula anchorage by the chief engineer of this department. The beacon near the wharf on the south side has disappeared and should be removed from the chart. The wharf has been enlarged to carry cannery buildings and has now a width of probably 200 feet, occupied by the large buildings. The road to the south side of the valley has fallen into disrepair and is now no better than a footpath. The wagon road now used is on the north side of the valley. The alternative name of Bela Kula river, Nookhalk, is not now used and may be dropped as obsolete. The shoal at the head of the channel is reported to be extending every year, its edge is certainly now farther west than charted. The provincial government have built a new pier wharf on the north side of the inlet, with a long approach on piles leading to it. There is a good road from this wharf to the new settlement about a mile up the valley on the south side of the Necanicum river, which empties at the north extreme end of the flat. The houses shown at Custom House point have disappeared. The paragraphs on page 481, British Columbia Pilot, third edition, 1905, respecting Swanson bay and Khutze arm, should be replaced by the following paragraphs, describing present conditions: Swanson bay lies on the north shore, seven miles from Sarah Island. A large sawmill and pulp mill have been established here by the Canadian Pacific Sulphite Pulp Company, and the settlement shows conspicuously when passing. A long wharf, extending 556 feet into the bay from high water mark, with a depth of 25 feet alongside at low tide, has been built in the northern part of the bay west of the stream shown, and vessels can be watered from piers on the wharf. The settlement is electrically lighted and the bay may be entered at any time without a pilot. The anchorage in the northern part of Swanson bay is no longer available, being filled with sawlogs. There is a conspicuous water abutment on the south shore of the channel, abutment Swanson bay; in very dry summers this is reduced to a very small size, and even occasionally ceases altogether.

Khutze arm is on the north shore, six miles westward of Swanson bay. It is five cables wide, and lies in a N. E. rocky spit, with from two to four fathoms water over it, extends from the south side of the arm, one mile within the entrance, to within one cable of the north shore; anchorage may be had about one cable westward of the spit in 10 to 20 fathoms. Above the anchorage the water is deep, with no known dangers. Three miles from the entrance the arm turns abruptly eastward and ends a mile farther up in tidal flats. There is a good watering place, constant throughout the year at the water-fall on the glacial stream on the south side of the head, with anchorage in fifteen fathoms one cable off the stream. A pile wharf with a shed on it stands on the edge of the flats on the south side of the mouth of the extensive river that runs through the valley, emptying at the north extremity of the flats. Coasting steamers land supplies at the wharf for a mining camp up the river. The figure of a man boxing on the cliff near the head of the arm has been obliterated by a growth of shrubbery. The note should be removed from the chart.

U. S. DREADNOUGHT LAUNCHED.

Quincy, Mass., Nov. 10.—The battleship North Dakota, the first American war vessel of the Dreadnought class, was launched at the yard of the Fore River Ship Building Co. at Quincy Point today. The launching took place at 12:27 p. m.

COMMANDER SPAIN INSPECTS CREW

Y. M. C. A. Boys Receive Congratulations After Showing Their Mettle.

Commander Spain, R. N., commissioner of wrecks, took the life-boat men out on Saturday for a trip, and in loud in the praise of the Y. M. C. A. crew, who were well able to tackle the boat on any emergency, and said he had not met with a finer body of young men. They listened with attention to the captain's instructions for some hours. Capt. Pierson accompanied them.

The commander took the helm at the boat and put the men through their drill which they executed in first rate manner. Coxswain Lawrie received the congratulations on the manner in which his men executed the work. The Y. M. C. A. boys were glad to be able to show the stuff of which they are made and were pleased with the courteous way in which they were treated by the commander. Commissioner Spain has started for the East but he may be recalled to investigate the collision between the steamers Princess Royal and Fukui Maru.

The last steamer from Owen Sound will probably be on November 20th, the same date as last year. Effective November 16th, the C. P. R. will therefore discontinue accepting shipments from the Coast destined to Eastern Canada, for forwarding via lake and rail, via Port William and Port Arthur, and any shipments taken for lake and rail route are only accepted with the understanding that they will travel all-rail at all-rail rates, if they do not reach the lake-rail time to go forward via the lake route.

GLASS-MAKING MARVELS.

A machine has been introduced recently which can be built to produce either the narrow or wide-necked variety of bottles at an extraordinary rate. Its capacity is estimated at twelve bottles per minute, and one man can look after three machines at the same time. The speed of the machines is not sufficient for them to run hot; they can therefore be operated for twenty-four hours every day, which makes the output about 350 gross of bottles per day at a labor expense of three men on eight-hour turns or two on twelve.

There is a great demand in China for glass. It is used in several kinds of manufactures, but chiefly for lining tea-chests for export.

WHAT HIS LINERS EAT.

Lusitania and Mauretania Each Consume 1,000 Tons of Coal and 450,000 Tons of Water a Day.

Wonderment at the dimensions of the two great liners, Lusitania and Mauretania, has subsided. It is taken for granted that nothing is too great in size to float the Atlantic, and that the limitations of speed of the liner of the future will be that of the United States navy.

But in the period of interest in these two great liners, it is not surprising that they were not accessible to the public. The stupendous figures concerning their consumption of coal and water are one of these levitations only recently are leaking out for the wonderment of the world. That such giant vessels could be propelled through the water at 25 miles an hour and more day after day hinted at an enormous consumption of coal. Here are some of the concrete figures.

In the bunkers of one of these vessels 7,000 tons of coal are stored for the Atlantic trip. This means that 145 coal cars of 100,000 pounds capacity each would be required to load these bunkers to their capacity. This would require five monster locomotives and the crew of five trains to deliver this one loading of coal at the docks.

How much of this coal is burned on the Atlantic trip is known to only a few privileged persons. But it is known that in round figures each vessel consumes 1,000 tons, or 2,000,000 pounds of coal each twenty-four hours.

EE A MOTHER'S EE
HAPPY THOUGHT.
A lady writes from Ireland says—"I went to see my sister's baby, who was very ill indeed. She had been up for nights with him without undressing; he was crying all the time as with some internal pain.
The doctor told her he could do nothing except put him in a warm bath, which gave him a little ease for the time being."
I thought of STEEDMAN'S SOOTHING POWDERS which I used for my own children; and next day I sent some to my sister, when she gave the child half a powder according to directions. For the first time for a fortnight she and the baby, and, in fact, all the household, had a good night's sleep, and the little fellow has continued to improve ever since.
These powders do not contain poison, nor are they a narcotic; but they act gently on the bowels, thus relieving feverish heat and preventing fits, colicisms, etc.
Please notice that the name
STEEDMAN is always spelt with EE.

This evening at Knox Church Stanley avenue, there is to be a social gathering of the members and adherents for the purpose of considering the Laymen's Missionary Movement which has swept over this continent.
Short, bright addresses will be delivered by R. S. Day, A. T. Frampton and others, interspersed with good music.
Refreshments will be served. A large gathering is looked for, invitations having been extended to the congregation

THANKSGIVING DINNER TO PRAIRIE FRIENDS

James Porter Entertained Company at Empress Hotel
Last Evening.

James Porter was the host of a delightful reunion of prairie friends at the Empress last night, the celebration taking the form of a dinner party.

The long table was a marvel of brilliance and beauty. The color scheme being most effectively carried out in crimson and green. A long trail of smyrna, running the entire length of the table in zig-zag fashion, was dotted with red carnations. Three large bag-kets filled with ferns and carnations, and two beautiful branching candelabra, with red shades, completed the decorations, than which nothing could have been prettier.

A most elaborate Thanksgiving menu was served by attentive waiters, and a toast to the King was proposed by the host which was responded to most enthusiastically.

The entire company then adjourned to the Empress drawing room, when a most enjoyable social hour was spent in conversation and song. A feature of the evening was the presentation to each guest of a souvenir from the host of a handsome booklet containing a lengthy and very clever poem written by himself in commemoration of the Quebec tercentenary.

Mr. Porter then read the poem with splendid effect, and the company dispersed after singing "Auld Lang Syne."

Over the Back Fence

Mrs. Bantly leaned one arm on the fence and beckoned with the other to Mrs. Bates, who was standing on her back steps.

"Come here, till I tell you about the fun we had at the debate last night," she said.

"I saw only one side of it," Mrs. Bates answered, as she hesitatingly approached.

"Well, I won't keep you, but I must tell somebody of last night's debate." Mrs. Bantly said.

"You see, some of us just wanted to call the club we just organized the Debating Society; for, my word there are so many societies now that no matter what name you would choose in the animal kingdom from the ant to the zebra, you would find that some other society had used it first, but, my word, Mrs. Dolittle is from Boston and you know what those New England women are. I thought I never could find anything they did of any account but sat beams. Well, nothing would do her but that we should call the society the Lyceum; she said that was so new and original. Old Mr. Peters wouldn't stand for that at all, and said we'd call the society by no half-breed name, and said on to say that Lyceum was derived from the dead languages and was partly from the Chinook jargon. He said Ly was from the Greek and signified big story, and ce-um from the Chinook, and the whole thing meant
'see-em lie'."

"That struck me as funny, and I moved that the name 'see-em lie' should be adopted. I thought it would show the world that we weren't ashamed to come out in our true colors, and that's more than most of the societies
do. But of course I didn't get my way about it. I never do in anything."

"But, my word, if you'd guess a week you'd never hit on what they really did decide to call it, so I may as well tell you. The Debating Club of Original Research, and the name it will be known by is the D. C. O. R. and if its records don't go down to history then you can set me down as no prophet."

Mrs. Bates showed signs of leaving the fence, but her narrator put out a detraining hand.

"I'll get right to the point, and I won't keep you a minute longer than I can help, but I simply can't do a turn of work in the house till I've told somebody about last night. The debate was on the woman suffrage question, with Mrs. Dolittle and me for it, I mean on the affirmative, of course, and Mr.
Peters and Mr. Jones against it."

"My word, it seems like tempting Providence to know so much and talk so wise as that man Peters did. When he started out he went so fast that I made me think of the old rhyme: 'The fire began to burn the stick, the stick began to lick the kid, and the kid began to go.'"

"He used to take education lessons, and he can talk as loud and look as wild as any actor I ever saw, and dangle his voice down as low, and make as queer gestures as the queerest actor I ever saw."

"His face got as red as his waist I have on, and he talked so hard and got so excited that, my word, I was afraid he would have a fit of apoplexy. He said that nobody could get ahead of him in esteeming women, but he set principle up in his mind higher than any female, higher even than his wife. He struck himself on the breast, and said it was principle he was upholding; the principle of the male sex not being infringed on. That was his stand, he said, and he jumped about three feet off the platform and came down with such a thud that he shook the platform."

"For a woman to be allowed to talk in public on momentous and weighty subjects, which they want weight, said he, would have the dangerous tendency of making them feel they were equal to man. It would have a tendency to infringe on him, and if there's anything a man can't or won't stand, it's having women infringe on his rights and privileges, and so, he continues, striking himself on the breast with one hand and stretching the other arm out so far I was afraid he would burst his coat sleeve, 'on those grounds, as a Latin author observes in a similar case:
I deny her the right 'in tato toto.'"

"My word, I suppose he thought that Latin word would scare me, but I'm not so easily scared, and I don't suppose he knew what it meant any more than I did, and I have my doubts whether it means anything or not."

"Keep the women from voting if you would be safe and happy," says he, glaring at the men. Men have their place," he says, striding forward a long step with his right foot, and stretching out his left arm toward the ceiling, and women have theirs, stepping back a long step with his left foot, and pointing with his right hand down to the basement, or maybe, he was the lower regions, he meant, and it is necessary for the public safety," says he, smiting his breast first with his right hand and then with his left, "that they each keep the place where Providence saw fit to put them. As it is now, the nation is safe, here he stopped and grinned like a Cheshire cat, and men and women were safe," he grinned twice; first at the men and then at the women, "but if women are ever permitted in the future to take part in directing the affairs of the nation, they will bring the mighty structure of the British Empire to ruin."

"Here he struck himself on the breast and stood still for a moment, to see the effect of his words, and then he struck himself on the breast again, a sudden and violent blow with his thumb, the fingers all standing out straight like the bones of a fan—and went on. For I say unto you, here he stopped and nodded his head to the audience, and to the world, with a roar like a wild beast, beware of the female poll!"

"My word, I never in my whole life heard a poll sound so faint and sickly as that poll did. It dwindled away almost to nothing, and he half shut his eyes and staggered off the platform as if he was going off some place to die."

"Some of the women were scared most to death, but I knew it was all acting, and that down in the bottom of his heart he wanted to win. After about half a minute he came on the stage again, for I suppose he'd looked at his watch on the sly and saw his time wasn't quite up, and he repeated words in a sickly tone.

"Remember, I say, beware of the female poll. Beware! Beware!"

"My word! I was scared myself that time, for he straightened right up, and yelled out the two beware like a couple of claps of thunder; and his eyes kept growing bigger and bigger, and his voice grew louder and louder till it seemed as if it would raise the very roof, and he looked round the audience as if he were saying, 'I ever told you so, and struck himself a fearful blow on
the stomach, and says he:

"Beware of being infringed upon!" and then followed another tremendous blow. "Beware of that terrible, terrible day when the women of our land shall dig at us with their elbows, and trample upon our corns with their feet, as they force their way through our ranks to the polling booths!"

"With that he stood perfectly still, looked all around the house with that wise and owl-like look, and then, in a slow, impressive way, just like an actor, he raised his hands, struck his breast with the palms of them, and sat down."

"I heard some folks saying afterwards how expressive his gestures were, but, my word, it was all practice. He'd probably studied on every motion for days and days."

"Then it was my turn, but, my word!
I felt like a fool when I got upon the platform, and I couldn't think of one word of all the splendid speech I'd prepared. I looked down, and there was Ralph looking as tickled as if he'd got a fortune. My word! I was that mad I could have taken off my slipper and thrown it at him. The harder I tried to remember, the farther away everything went, till at last I walked off that platform without saying a single word."

Ralph told me after we got home that he never supposed it possible that my tongue would fail me—and once in his life he really did seem sympathetic, and that made up for a good deal. I can tell you."

"My word! If I could have a chance to-day wouldn't I take the wind out of that man Peters' sails."

"After I sat down Mr. Jones got up, and of course the men had things all their own way just as they always do.
He had tried to make gestures and motions up out of his own head, but the only one he'd got broke in so that he could handle it to any advantage, was pointing his forefinger at the audience, with the rest of his hand shut up, darting it out sometimes as if it were a bayonet—he was going to run through our hearts, and sometimes holding it back, and taking a more deliberate aim with it as if it were a pistol. His other gesture was lifting his coat tails and spreading them out, and, my word, but it was funny. He had an old fashioned dress coat on, with long skirts, that came most to the floor; he'd lift them up as if he were lifting them out of the mud, and keep on lifting them till they stood out in front of his arms like wings."

"Thus," says he, I clear my coat tails of the whole matter. You see me clear them. None of the bloody ruin that will follow if the women are allowed to have their own way; can be laid to my coat tails."

"Women," says he, dropping the coat tails with a flop, and pointing with his forefinger, 'should make her family comfortable before she presumes to take upon herself the welfare of a nation.'"

"Women's minds and bodies are too weak and feeble," he went on, shaking the coat tails by their corners, "to tackle the subjects that will from time to time be brought up in parliament.
Their eyes are blinded by vanity, so that they cannot see the dangers hedg-ing around the new responsibilities they wish to take on themselves, and it is our duty as their natural protectors, to protect them from themselves. Here he got so excited he swung up the coat tails till they met above his head, to hold them back with our strong and loving arms, from the horrors of the abyss into which in their blindness and ignorance they would precipitate themselves! Here he dropped the coat tails and pointed downwards with each forefinger. Then I guess he thought he had clinched the subject, for he sat down."

Mrs. Dolittle got up next and talked a lot of high fluting stuff about its being women's duty to vote, for the sake of her children if not for herself.
She said: 'Duties of a citizen are the only ones a woman could cling to with perfect safety. That inclination sometimes wears a far more shining apron, and her glittering strings flutter down before you invitingly, and you feel as if you must just go of duty, and take hold of them. Then she went on to say that safety was not there, that the strings of inclination were thin and hazy, and liable to fall to pieces any minute. But if women hung on to Duty's apron strings boldly and blindly, even though the way led over rough pathways, and through deep waters, and up the mountain side, they needn't be afraid, for the strings wouldn't break, and the country Duty would lead them into would be a better one than they had left behind."

"Of course, it was all a lot of rubbish
she talked, but what else could you expect from a woman who was bred and brought up on beans! If I could only have remembered the speech I had ready I'd have had every man in the audience wanting to bring on a new election, so that I should have a chance to vote."

The tea you buy may be good, but you may be quite sure it is if it is "Sa-lada." It is infinitely more delicious, and decidedly more economical than other teas because it goes farther. 64

THE COMMON APPLE A GREAT SOURCE OF HEALTH

THE JUICE OF THE ORDINARY APPLE IS ONE OF THE BEST THINGS IN THE WORLD FOR KEEPING THE BLOOD PURE.

Few people there are but enjoy the juice of the apple. But how many realize that it is a medicine as well as a treat?

Apple juice has a very marked effect on the kidneys, increasing their power to throw off the waste products of the body, called urea, and thus prevent Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuralgia, and similar troubles that come from poisoned blood.

Similarly, other fruits stimulate the action of the liver and bowels—others of the skin. Combined, they keep the blood pure—the body clean and healthy.

To get this effect, however, one must eat a great deal of fruit, or better, eat a little fruit and take "Fruit-a-lives."
"Fruit-a-lives" are tablets in which the juices of ripe fruits, with their medicinal value intensified, are combined with valuable tonics. They act directly on Bowels, Kidneys and Skin and put them in perfect condition—thus ensuring the thorough elimination of all waste matter and poisons from the body. Trial box 25c. Regular size 50c
—6 boxes for $2.50. Fruit-a-lives Limited, Ottawa.

FATAL CRASH AT VANCOUVER

STREET CARS COLLIDE; TWO DEAD; SCORE INJURED

Central Park Residents Among Victims—Shocking Midnight Catastrophe.

Vancouver, Nov. 9.—A horrible accident occurred shortly after midnight when a head-on collision took place between the 11 o'clock New Westminster car and the 11:30 o'clock car from Vancouver, bound for Central Park.

Motorman Murdoch McDonald, of the New Westminster car, was instantly killed.
Motorman Jamieson, of the Westminster car, was so badly injured that he died on Sunday and about 15 or 20 passengers were injured, a number of them seriously, while others escaped with cuts about the head and a bad shaking up.

The accident occurred between Benson and Gladstone. The cars from Vancouver were let through at Cedar Cottage, and the one in front collided with the Westminster car, which was traveling very fast towards Vancouver. The Westminster car ran into the other and drove through it as far as the second compartment. Both cars were badly wrecked, the track being strewn with pieces of wood and the seats smashed up. The people were thrown to the floor and those in the front part of the car were severely hurt. The list of killed and injured is as follows:

Motorman Murdoch McDonald, killed; Motorman Jamieson, broken leg;
Willard Robertson, fractured thigh;
A. Gray, broken leg; J. Farquharson, broken leg; G. Farquharson, broken leg; Constable A. S. Lowry, of the Vancouver police force, head slightly cut; W. MacLach, head cut; Frank Parr, head cut; A. C. Curran, Colling-wood, cuts about head; W. S. Sherk, contusion on knee; W. T. Harris, condutor on Westminster car, head injured; A. McLeach, head cut; D. C.
Craig, Cedar Cottage, hip hurt; Mr.
Murphy, badly shaken up; Miss Bennett, Central park, leg injured; Sylvester Johnson, Central Park, leg injured; Lee Chow, head injured.

Story of a Passenger.
J. Belyea, of this city, who was a passenger on the car from New Westminster, was sitting in the rear compartment. He stated that he heard a whistle and then there was a roar as the two cars crashed into each other.
He was thrown across the aisle, but escaped unhurt.

W. F. Gardner, the well-known local architect, had a marvelous escape.
He was sitting in the last seat of the front compartment and when the collision occurred his head was forced through the partition window. Fortunately his hat saved his face and he was not hurt.

The scene was heartbreaking; the lights went out and added to the horror.
Dr. Storr was picked up at Cedar Cottage and at once attended to the injured, rendering every possible assistance. The through Westminster car was brought back to the city as fast as possible, all the injured people being placed in it. George McArthur, the motorman, and Dave Miller, the conductor, were of great assistance in caring for those who were hurt and the former brought the car to the city in splendid style.

It was 12:40 o'clock when the car reached Vancouver, and medical men at once attended to the sufferers. The General Hospital ambulance, the police patrol and five hacks were required to take the people to the hospital. The doctors in attendance here were Dr.
Boyle, Dr. McTavish, Dr. Coulthard and Dr. Keith.

The news of the accident had spread very quickly, and the B. C. Electric Railway Company's station was besieged by a crowd of people anxious to know if friends were safe.

The second car from Vancouver which was bound for New Westminster, is the one which usually goes ahead of the other at Cedar Cottage, but on Saturday night, for some unknown reason this was not done and the cars kept their respective positions. The result was that the car bound for Central park was in the smash up, while the other escaped. Most of the people who were hurt were residents of Central park on their way home. The car for Westminster had a large number of passengers, many of them ladies, but none were hurt. W. N. Carthy, of the New Westminster Columbian, was in the second car and rendered great assistance, being very active in the rescue work.

When the news of the accident reached the city a special car was ordered; but for some time a crew was unavailable.
Meanwhile the car arrived with the injured people, and after seeing that everything possible was done for them,
R. H. Sperling, general superintendent,
F. Glover, general manager, and W.
Woodroffe went out to the wrecked cars. The body of Murdoch McDonald had been lying beside the track where he was thrown when the cars collided. His remains were carried to the special car and brought to the city.

Several passengers who had escaped from the wreck unhurt and who had remained at the scene while the injured were brought here, came to the city on that car, while others who were bound to New Westminster were sent there on another car.

The accident was probably caused by a mistake in the switching, combined with the exceptionally thick fog which prevailed on Saturday night.

A full inquiry will be held.
It is not known if the driver of the New Westminster car was under the influence of drink.

NEW CATHOLIC CHURCH.

Corner Stone of New Edition at Vernon Laid by Very Rev. Father Welsh.

Vernon, Nov. 9.—An interesting ceremony took place here when the corner stone of the new St. James' church, which is being erected by the Roman Catholic congregation of this city, was laid by the vicar-general, the Very Rev.
Father Welsh, assisted by Fathers Gar-ron, Pecoli and Covan. An eloquent and impressive address was delivered by the vicar-general. He conveyed the regrets of His Lordship Bishop Domett well at not being able to be present. He then performed the ceremony of blessing the position of the altar, the corner stone and the foundations of the sacred edifice. An opportunity being given for those present to contribute towards the building fund, a large sum was laid upon the stone; and the vicar-general thanked those who had so generously made donations. He also expressed his thanks and appreciation for the services of the men's committee of the church, and the ladies' altar society by whom the work had been done.

WESTMINSTER CIVIC CONTEST

Mayor Kearney Probably Will Be Returned by Acclamation.

New Westminster, Nov. 8.—Mayor Kearney, and at least four, and possibly five of the retiring aldermen will be candidates at the forthcoming municipal election. The only two who have intimated their intention to retire are Ald. Shiles and E. J. Fader. It was thought Ald. Henley, many aspirants for office of alderman are forthcoming, but no one seems particularly anxious for a change in the mayoralty. It was freely stated some time ago that W.
Norman Bole, K.C., would stand, but it is said on good authority that he will not now offer himself. D. D. Bourke, who was approached, has also declined for the present. Ald. Johnston will not likely enter the field this year.

Among the alderman possibilities are D. D. Bourke, George Adams, who has already served creditably in the council, and another ex-alderman, Marshall Sinclair. The last two have not given their final answer to the deputations which have waited on them.

NEW SCHOOL FOR FERNIE.

Work on Building Which Will Cost $30,- 000 is Now Under Way.

Fernie, Nov. 8.—The contract for the building of the Fernie public school has been let to the Fernie Construction Company, the price being $30,000. The work of excavating for the basement has already been commenced and operations will be carried on as rapidly as possible. When completed it will be a very handsome structure and the interior will be most convenient and modern.

The Cobin mines in the Flathead country are already shipping coal. Not only was the railway in that section of the country completed in record time, but the mines have been developed and are producing coal much sooner than was expected.

The Knights of Pythias are going to erect an up-to-date hall containing several lodge rooms. The contract calls for a $7,000 building and work will be commenced immediately.

ACCIDENTALLY SHOTS HIMSELF

Kamloops Man is in Hospital Suffering From Bullet Wound.

Kamloops, Nov. 8.—The third of a series of gun accidents took place here when Richard Ruston, a plumber in the employ of H. Shotton, received a bullet in the left lung through the accidental discharge of a 22-calibre rifle.
It is understood that Ruston and another were in a rig and about to proceed to Transville; Ruston was about to get out of the rig near Third avenue when the weapon fell and the trigger catching upon some projection, the rifle was discharged. Ruston fell back in the buggy and his companion immediately drove him to the hospital, where he is receiving every attention.

SUPPLIES LIQUOR TO INDIANS.

Vancouver, Nov. 8.—William O'Brien was sentenced to six months' imprisonment and a fine of $200, or in default five months more, for supplying liquor to Indians. Jennie Hogan, a squaw, who was found in company with him, was fined $25, or a month in jail for having liquor in her possession.

FIFTY YEARS IN PROVINCE.

New Westminster, Nov. 9.—Isaac Kipp, of Chilliwack, one of the oldest and best known settlers in the Fraser valley, celebrated his sixty-ninth birthday last week. He came to British Columbia fifty years ago.

BRONCHIAL TROUBLES

More Cases Reported — Symptoms
More Severe Than Last Year.

Fortunately there is a prompt cure, one that everybody can use, day or night, at home or at work. Catarrhrhoe is a marvelous cure for bronchial affections. Relief comes instantly in every case.

Capt. Dunlop, the well-known steamboat owner of Kingston, says: "Along with many others I have pleasure in expressing my grateful thanks for the benefits derived from using Catarrhrhoe. I suffered twenty years from bronchitis, and experienced my first relief from Catarrh-rhoe which I am convinced is the best bronchial remedy on the globe."

The dollar package of Catarrh-rhoe lasts two months, and is guaranteed to cure permanently; sample size twenty-five cents at all dealers. Beware of substitutes which are not so good as "Catarrh-rhoe."

BOOMS OF LOGS

SWEEPED OUT TO SEA

Damage Caused by Floods Will Reach Thousands of Dollars.

Vancouver, Nov. 9.—Stories of disaster resulting from floods and freshets, following the recent heavy rains, are coming in from every side. The local branch of the meteorological department declares that the rainfall during the past week was the heaviest yet recorded in the history of the province.
Local losses have been heavy. Basements and cellars have been flooded in the wholesale section, the loss running into thousands of dollars, headed with heavy double figures. One large retail store estimates its loss at considerably over $10,000.

From outside sources come stories of heavy loss to the logging and timbering interests. In the Campbell River district the loss is estimated at $40,000.
The International Timber Company had the big boom swept out to sea by the flood, and others followed the same fate. From other streams along the coast come reports of losses of less magnitude, but of a similar nature. The streams were swelled to raging torrents, the booms burst and were scattered, and though all the tugboats available are busy gathering up what logs they can. The loss must be very great.

The C. P. R. service suffered from the floods. Some time during Thursday night the rush of water and logs down the Stave river brought such pressure against the bridge at Ruskin as to cause it to sway sufficiently in the centre to move the rails to such an extent that the morning train from Vancouver to Seattle had to be cancelled, and both transcontinental trains were held up for a few hours.

From the creeks north of the inlet come reports of heavy landslides and washouts. Captain Stevens' residence at Moodyville had a narrow escape from being swept into the inlet. The overflow from the flume cut a trench into the bank, causing a landslide about fifty feet wide. The slide spared the house, but took away the fences, flower beds, sidewalk and stable, and deposited them all in the inlet. A landslide in the Lynn valley also washed away about 120 feet of flume near the North Vancouver waterworks intake.

MAY EXTEND RANCH.

White Pass Probably Will Build Into White Horse Camp.

Vancouver, Nov. 9.—"Proved circumstances warrant we will next season complete construction of the spur from the main line into the mineral zone of the White Horse copper camp; seven miles, or half of the road, was built this summer."

This statement was made by Mr. A.
L. Berdoo, general manager of the White Pass & Yukon Route, who arrived from the north accompanied by W. B. King, auditor and head of the traffic department of the railway and river steamboat line.

"This season we constructed the heaviest portion of the spur, and carried it through some distance beyond the Arctic Circle mine, and to a property known as the 'Chance Chance,'" continued Mr. Berdoo. "Beyond that point the work is all light, and I believe that inside of two months the rails can be put down on the remainder of the spur.
When operations were stopped on September 15 we had really done more than we expected this year."

"At Skagway ore bunkers with a capacity of 5,000 tons were built ready for service."
"While the North suffered from the depression this year in common with the rest of the country, I am certain that next year conditions will be much improved."

LEAD OUTPUT INCREASED.

Sixty Tons Turned Out Daily at Trail Smelter.

Rossland, Nov. 8.—At the lead refinery of the Consolidated Co. at Trail, 60 tons of lead are turned out each day.
Most of this is shipped to Shanghai, China and to Yokohama, Japan, and the remainder to Toronto.

Another large copper-gold furnace is being installed which will have a capacity of about 500 tons a day. This is intended to replace a smaller copper-gold furnace that was torn down some time since. When this furnace is completed the smelter will have a capacity of about 1,600 tons of copper-gold ore a day.

The increased quantities of ore that are being received from the Centre Star and its allied mines and from the leased and owned properties of the Consolidated Co. in the Phoenix camp, make the additional furnace a necessity.

QUESTION OF JURISDICTION

Can Court Grant Judicial Separation When Parties are Domiciled in Another Province.

Vancouver, Nov. 8.—Has the British Columbia court the power to grant judicial separation when the parties are domiciled in another province? This important question has been raised in the application of Mrs. Jamieson, formerly of Montreal, where her husband is now residing. Mr. Justice Morrison reserved judgment upon the application after a long technical argument of counsel, Robert Crossley, K. C., appearing for the applicant, and Sir Charles Hibbert, Tupper, K. C., and D. Donaghy opposing it.

The natural gas product of the United States, in 1907, amounted to 38,342,620 cubic feet, valued at $16,973,322. This is quite a substantial increase over the previous year.

THINGS THAT THE WORLD WOULD LIKE

Every one respects the man who invented the stud with a movable head, says the London Express. He is one of the benefactors of mankind. No one has heard his name, but he has done more for humanity than any Napoleon. He has given the whole world five minutes' every morning trailing of the years, thus saving the temperaments preserved.

It is, on the other hand, impossible to be friendly with the man who invented that obstinate and arbitrary thing of bone which used to be the ruin of all collars. Such a man can only be forgotten, and, if possible, forgiven. He is in the same category as the man who thought of the top hat, of the starched shirt, or the hansom street whig. There is no excuse for him.

It is, in fact, necessary that the inventor should be a man of a sensitive and amiable disposition. He must know all the weaknesses of humanity and be prepared to respond to them.
He must not scorn the little things,
and he must remember that the man who thought of geloshes made a fortune. He need not worry so much about flying machines as about studs.
It is more necessary that he should add to his comfort than to our utility.

Replace Button Hook.

An appeal, for instance, was made the other day by a correspondent for something to take the place of the elusive button hook. A button hook is admittedly one of the things that can never be found. Its gift of disappearance is shared only with time tables, keys and openers of mineral water bottles.

It is time some one thought of a substitute for the button hook. Every one who has hurt his or her fingers in a desperate attempt to do up buttons would welcome such an invention.
String has been tried, but it is not satisfactory. There is a fortune waiting for the inventor of something which would make a button hook unnecessary. There is another waiting for the inventor of the unbreakable leadence.

Other inventions become more necessary every day. How is it, for instance, that the umbrella is allowed to remain so primitive? In its present form it is a clumsy device for protecting one part of one's body at the expense of another. By its assistance the rain is conducted in a concentrated form to one's legs and boots. In a crowd it is a constant source of irritation, as it benefits only the person immediately beneath it, and drips water on any one else who comes within its range. In a wind it may blow inside out at any moment. Surely the mind of man can think of something better than the umbrella?

Sliding Roofs.

Then, too, the dormant. Could anything be more unsatisfactory? In its present form it is simply a raising ground for germs. The Lancet ought to issue a pamphlet against it. What is needed is a revolving, self-cleaning roof, on which dust or mud could not accumulate. The visitor would put his foot on the mat and the dust would be whirled into a receiver. A small electric motor would provide the power.
Every one complains of the heat in the summer, and many people are unable to sleep successfully at night.
Why should not bedrooms have sliding roofs? Nothing could be more healthy or enjoyable than to be protected by walls, but free from the oppression of the roof.

The man who thought of the fourtain pen was a kindly soul, but he might have gone further and made certain that it would not ink one's fingers or overflow into one's pocket. A gauge should be fitted so that one could tell when the ink is nearly exhausted.

Glass is all very well, but it is quite unsuitable for hansom, and has been the cause of many accidents. Something of equal transparency, but flexible is wanted.
The pipe is one of the pillars of society, but the perfect pipe is yet to come. There are many which claim perfection, but there is always a weak point, either of shape, or weight, or price. At present every smoker starts by trying about six different patents, but after a time becomes careless about the effects of nicotine, and goes back to the ordinary patentless briar.
What is wanted is a pipe which insures absolute dryness and coolness, but does not embarrass the smoker by its grotesque shape or excessive weight.

Those Chairs.

Chairs are improving, but they are still uncomfortable. They are too angular and unresponsive, and they are made in too wholesale a way. A man ought to be fitted for his chair, just as he is fitted for his clothes. One of the disadvantages of society is the necessity for sitting in other people's chairs.

A fortune is, in fact, waiting for the professor of chairs. He would give advice on the art of sitting down, and at the end of the consultation would measure his patient and hand over the measurements, with notes, to the chair building department. What could be more grotesque than to expect a man six feet two inches tall to be comfortable in a chair meant for a man of five feet six? What is more painful than to see a woman sitting in a chair which gives her no opportunity to be graceful?

DEPLETION OF FORESTS.

Nearly Forty Billion Feet Cut in United States in One Year.

The United States' timber areas are showing the effects of prodigious depletion. In 1907, the lumber cut amounted to 37,550,726,000 feet, board measure.
Other timber products will bring the total product to about 40,000,000,000 feet.
The cut of white pine has fallen off about 40 per cent. in the last eight years; oak has decreased 36 per cent., and Douglas fir has increased 136 per cent. Yellow pine is now the leading product, with Douglas fir second. The southern forests of the United States still contain great wealth of lumber, but a few years will bring the country face to face with the problem of timber conservation in an acute form.

JEWELS OF ANTIQUITY.

Roman Jewellery Was Elaborate—Byzantine and Grecian—Precious Stones of the Middle Ages.

Roman Jewellery was so elaborate and so much worn that nothing in ancient or modern times compares with it. Diadems and tiaras were worn by Roman women on head-dresses studded with pearls, rubies and sapphires.
Long gold hairpins elaborately worked were used in arranging the hair. At the ears were worn precious stones, usually pearls, while several rows of chains hung from the necks of men and women.

An amulet was an indispensable ornament with all classes of society. Superstition made amber a favorite material for necklaces. It was supposed to be not only ornaments, but a protection against danger, especially witchcraft, and amber in which small insects were enclosed was particularly prized.

As for rings, they were so much in vogue that Martial speaks of a man who wore six on every finger. Some individuals had different sets of rings for summer and winter.

The Byzantine Jewellery, though not as lavishly displayed, had far more influence on the work of future generations than the Roman.
The early ornaments of the greater part of Europe remained for many centuries quite untouched by the culture which prevailed in Rome and Greece. Late Anglo-Saxon Jewellery occupies an important position in the history of the goldsmith's art. Its chief beauty lies in the delicate gold work, but the harmonious blending of colors is also noticeable.

One of the chief ornaments of this period was the Celtic brooch, many fine examples of which are to be seen in the Irish academy, Dublin, and the National museum, Edinburgh. One of the world-famous brooches is the Tara. It probably belongs to the tenth century, and is composed of white bronze thickly gilded.

During the middle ages extreme respect was paid to precious stones.
They were regarded as charms.

The Renaissance brought in all sorts of beautiful Jewellery, but the most popular as well as the finest pieces were the neck pendants. The designs on these ornaments were innumerable. A famous pendant is the one presented to Sir Francis Drake by Queen Elizabeth. It is set in front with a fine Renaissance cameo in oriental sardonyx representing two heads, a negro in the upper and dark layer and a classical head in the light layer of stone. Behind is a miniature by Hilliard of Elizabeth. This pendant is bordered with a rich enamelling in red, yellow, blue and green and set with diamonds and rubies. Beneath hangs a cluster of pearls terminating in a magnificent pearl drop.

A JAPANESE LOVE TRAGEDY.

BOARD RESERVES ITS DECISION

ARGUMENT IN AMUR- VADSO COLLISION

Commander Spain Promises to Announce Findings at Early Date.

The inquiry into the collision between the C. P. R. steamer Amur and the Hecquet Company's steamer Vadoso at Trivet Point was concluded on Saturday afternoon and the judgment of the nautical board by which it was conducted was reserved, but will shortly be announced.

Before argument was entered upon, J. B. Walls, who appeared for Captain Locke, of the Amur, at whose request the inquiry was held, asked Captain Johnson, of the Vadoso, a few questions but elicited nothing material. Captain Johnson said his vessel had not suffered any damage making her unseaworthy; a dozen rivet heads on the starboard were found to be leaking and nothing more.

J. E. McMullen, who appeared for the Amur, summing up, said the case for the officers of the Amur was that on the evening in question the vessel was on its regular course when, off Trivet Point, the Vadoso by changing its course, had led to a collision.

The stand the Amur officers took was that the vessels were not crossing vessels within the meaning of the rules. Regulations governing the avoidance of accidents did not begin to apply till vessels were within such a distance of each other that anything done contrary to the rules would result in a collision. In this case the rules would not apply until after the Amur had changed its course.

The evidence of Thompson and Richardson, clearly was that if the Vadoso had continued the course it had indicated it was taking, and with the Amur having altered its course to suit, there would be no risk of collision. But the Vadoso, instead of continuing the starboard, turned to port.

In his evidence Captain Johnson said he was afraid to continue his course because it would have brought him on the point, while in another part he said he did not know where he was except by the length of time taken in running on that particular course. The Vadoso officers said the Amur's alteration of course took place after the Vadoso's first whistle, but the weight of evidence was that she made the regular alteration of course off Trivet Point while the Vadoso was, even by the evidence of its own officers, a mile away.

"If ordinary precautions had been taken by the Vadoso there would have been no accident," was Mr. McMullen's conclusion.

D. V. Bodwell, K.C., for the owners of the Vadoso, said Mr. McMullen had not been fair to Captain Johnson. The latter's evidence was not that he had altered his course because he was afraid of running on Trivet Point, but in answer to Mr. McMullen laying down a certain line on the chart he said that following it would have put the Vadoso aground. No man could be blamed for doing his best under the circumstances, and the Vadoso officers had done their best when a difficulty was created by the Amur so changing her course that she showed her green lights and all her lights on the starboard. Even if the Vadoso had reversed it would not have avoided the collision.

The contention of the Vadoso was that the Amur, in that channel, had no right to be anywhere else but on the starboard side, and that if because of being on the other side or even in mid-channel, any accident happened it was her fault. The Amur had no right to alter her course so as to cut across the bows of another vessel. There was no doubt that the Vadoso was the giving-way vessel and it was doing so. The Amur had no right to alter in any event, but if she did she certainly had absolutely no right to alter without making a signal. Her officers evidently went on the assumption that they could go anywhere and the other vessel must get out of the way.

If the Amur had whistled at all it was not in answer to the Vadoso. The condition of affairs appeared to be that when the vessels got close together the Amur officers woke up to the fact that there would be a collision, lost their heads and caused the accident which the Vadoso officers had been trying to avert for ten or fifteen minutes. The Amur was on the wrong side to begin with and then went to change across without giving any warning.

Mr. McMullen in reply argued that while the Vadoso was on the wrong side of the channel it should have kept on that side and continued on its course so as to avoid the collision.

Commander Spain, chairman of the board, stated that he would consult with his assessors—Captains Musgrave and Walbran—and their decision would be announced very shortly.

CLAIMS TO PENSIONS.

131,610 From Ireland, But Only 49,077 From Scotland.

The British chancellor of the exchequer, in answer to Timothy Davies, said that up to October 15th, £68,164 claims for old age pensions had been received by the pension officers. The claims were distributed as under:

England ..... 273,862
Ireland ..... 131,610
Scotland ..... 49,077
Wales ..... 13,415

Ireland has more old age pensioners, proportionately to its population, than any other part of the United Kingdom.

At the funeral of Mr. George Baxter Smith, the squib of Laxford, Eng., the coffin was conveyed to the churchyard on a farm wagon.

ANOTHER RICH GOLD STRIKE NEAR NOME

Find Is Considered Most Important—Will Mean Impetus to Mining.

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 10.—Information that a strike of considerable importance has been made within a few miles of Nome City since the last port yet discovered in this district, has been received in this city.

The message, which came to W. Hoskins from Mrs. Hoskins, conveys the intelligence that the strike was made somewhere between Irene creek and Cunningham creek, but its exact location is not mentioned.

Nome people who are now in Seattle believe, however, that the pay is a continuation of the streak found on the Lakeview claim and the other one or two properties in that vicinity. They also consider the find most important, as it demonstrates more fully than ever the fact that the third beach line extends farther east and is becoming better defined.

According to the description in the press, the discovery is some half dozen miles to the east of Nome City and about an equal distance from the busiest center of the diggings to the east on the third beach line. A considerable gap exists between the place where the pay has been located west of Fort Davis and the place where the new strike is reported to have been made. The location of the pay in that gap is expected to give new life to the placer operations on the tundra.

NEW PLANS FOR BATTLESHIPS.

Officers Are in Favor of Armor Belts Being Placed Higher Than at Present.

In an article entitled "The Fight for a New Navy," in the November McClure's, the writer presents the results of the Newport conference called by the president last July for consideration of alleged defects in battleship construction. The conference changed the position of the water line armor belt in plans for ships about to be constructed and adopted others of the changes declared necessary by critics of the construction plans last spring. The article says in part:

"The Newport conference decided that the line about which the armor belts of our future ships should be placed should be several inches higher on the ship than that of the Walker board—about a line reached when the ship has on board two-thirds of its coal and stores and all its ammunition. This recommendation alone would have meant that the belt be from two to three feet higher than it is upon our present ships. Off-setting this, it decided that it should extend six instead of five feet, as now, below the water line. In other words, the conference decided that the armor belt on future ships should be from one to two feet higher than that on practically all the vessels in the American navy now afloat.

"This would have made a great improvement in our old ships, with their narrow shellproof water line belts, but so far as the battleships now building are concerned this change in itself is not of great importance, because on these ships the band of armor, just above their water line belt is shellproof and consequently their water line has an ample high protection. But above this second belt was placed a thin armor, easily pierced. A shell passing this would shatter the unprotected flues from the boilers to the smokestacks and fill the big gun decks, and probably through broken ventilators the whole ship with smoke. A ship might easily be made inhabitable by this during battle. The conference voted that the flues of the next four ships should be given special protection, and that all future ships should have armor of proper thickness on their sides.

"The conference at Newport further voted that the broadside guns upon the four ships about to be built are too low to be used in ordinary trade wind weather. This conclusion could not be escaped after Admiral Evans' official report following observations on the trip of his ships about South America last winter, which reported that their broadside guns could not be effectively used in ordinary trade wind weather at a speed of ten knots, which is only two-thirds of the speed which would be made during battle.

"The broadside guns on our battleships are their principal protection against the attacks of torpedo boats—one of the greatest dangers of modern sea fighting. It is now officially established that the American fleet and also the next four battleships to be delivered in ordinary trade wind weather at a speed of ten knots, which is only two-thirds of the speed which would be made during battle.

"Minor changes of importance," the article says, "were also made. In the plans for the four new ships it was found that one of the magazines was surrounded by steam pipes. The conference recommended that a refrigerating plant be substituted. It recommended, also, better protection for the steering engine, the addition of a fire control mast, the lowering of smokestacks and ventilators which might catch and explode the shells of an enemy, and a change in the position of the after turrets."

Fake teeth are occasionally used for secretive purposes. An eccentric old lady boasts a roof plate which consists of two thin sheets of gold, between which a copy of her will in miniature is inserted. In like manner a chemical dyer preserves a prescription which he declared he would not disclose for a large sum.

Westminster city council (London) spends about $1,500 per annum in payment for doctors' certificates, which it insists upon all its employees forwarding when they fall ill. The council says it is money well spent, for the system prevents malingering.

OYSTER CULTURE

By Harwood Brierley in the Pall Mall Gazette.

Few creatures of such low organization as the oyster have served such a good purpose to mankind. In spite of recurring scares like that which was marked by the death of Dr. Stephens, of Winchester, from typhoid fever in December, 1907, as the supposed cause of his death, the oyster has served at a supper, the mollusc with the nautilus shell carried by pilgrims to the shrine of St. James at Compostela has always been regarded as precious food, and it must always remain so. Although except when young the oyster has very limited powers of locomotion—being, unlike other molluscs of the same class, possessed of a rudimentary "foot"—it has nevertheless circulated itself around the world and through many seas, forming "divers" industries of magnitude, and bringing wealth to many countries. Says a writer: "The oyster, like the pearl in the oyster, is content to remain quiet until it finds an opening. This sapient remark has some value as a text for a sermon on humility, but it has, I think, led many of the British people to expect altogether too much of the humble oyster, which even in its most perfect state does not bear the least of great price until it is taken from its shell. The profit attending the dredging of oysters from natural haunts on our own coasts, or even from planting and rearing them in a series of artificial beds, are certainly not always what they might be; although in all cases food supplies, not pearls, have formed the sole object of trading. I cannot discover that any species of oyster was ever actually marketed for its pearls, yet the early writers say that at a time when Rome had set the fashion, ranging around pearls as articles almost of priceless value Julius Caesar was led to undertake the invasion of England because his cupiditas had been fired by stories about the abundance of British pearls of great size and brilliance. This sounds very romantic, to modern minds, for we have always associated pearls with the warm seas of Ceylon, Madagascar, Panama, etc., and although it is evidently quite true that a little pearl fishing is done on the Scottish Tay, conchologists tell us that the bivalve found there is not the sea pearl oyster (Avicula margaritifera), but the river pearl mussel (Unto margaritifera), which is not uncommon in Europe. The traffic in common oyster shells does not benefit those who dredge or plant the oysters. Although there is an undoubted use for them in making ornamental grilles and rockeries; in the garden, for poultry runs; in gravel, for garden walks; and in dust, for certain cosmetics. Like lace, or mortar of pearl stripped from the valves of various oysters, the British fresh water mussel "Unto" can be used for inlay-work, buttons, etc. Five years ago, the best nucleus shells were worth $1,000 a ton in England, but the value of them has since greatly decreased.

But I am supposed to be writing about those edible marine molluscs popularly known as Whitestables, Brightlinges, Cleethropes, Bluepoint, Dutch, American and other oysters. During the autumn dredging does not largely in many British roadsteads and estuaries where oyster banks exist in water several fathoms deep. With favoring winds sail-bearing dredges scrape the bottom thoroughly as it has so often been scraped before, the rattling windlass being in day-long use; but in some places there are poor oystermen who have nothing but a small boat and a hand-dredge, and they can only work in fair weather when wind is absent, all the booty they take being sold cheaply to those who are properly equipped for rearing the same for market. There can be little doubt that on many coasts the steam trawlers have proved a disturbing agency of old oyster banks, for "queen oysters" of the Dogger Bank are now, I hear, being met with much nearer the land, where it is very doubtful if they can survive. In dredging operations during the prescribed time the hauls are mostly catch—immature oysters and great "dead weights" of empty old shells, which, although they have been turned over so many times in a season, are almost invariably cast overboard again as a nuisance for the spat-oyster "fry"—of next summer. All the oyster is returned, along with oysters of almost reputable size which will not slip readily through the boat's ring-gauge measuring 2½ in. across. These are illegal catch, the future generations of oysters being dependent on their reservation for spawning purposes. Each draught is emptied out of the dredge on to a broad shelf running all round the vessel, oysters of proper size being picked out of the mass of rubbish, and clusters of them knocked to pieces with a blow from the edge of the cull knife. In each haul there are usually crabs, mussels, whelks, starfishes, boring sponges, masses of clinkers, lumps of coal, etc.

The oyster is commonly credited with a preference for a quiet life far away from the hubbub of cities. But I never could have believed that some day a most disastrous Christmas-time cyclone twister would come in useful for literary application to a natural history sketch. "Every noise annoys an oyster, but a noisy noise annoys an oyster most." I shall now append a little list of noises likely to cause "ostrea" annoyance in so many fathoms of water. Ground swells, tremors undercurrents and trawls of fishing vessels are liable to scatter the nidus of old shells left for the oyster-fry. At those scarping sounds of the dredges one oyster may complain to another in a voice too subtle for an human ear to appreciate, even if it were not so far "aboveboard." One might think an oyster's shell hard enough with layers of calcareous matter to give it protection from marine enemies, especially seeing that a force of 1,313½ times the mollusc's weight, less its shell, is required to prise it open. And yet several creatures, such as whelks and boring sponges and starfishes, have found ways and means of devouring oysters. The latter possess no locomotive power; they remain cemented to the rocks, to their own natural banks or artificial beds, or to one another in clusters, by a calcareous exudation on the shell's outer surface, sucking in continuously a stream of water and straining off the vegetable diatoms, the foraminifera organisms and myriads of others all insignificant in size. Certain whelks and boring sponges fasten on the oyster's abode, as matter how "case hardened" it be with calcareous matter, and the oyster, conscious of a noise, goes on contracting its adductor muscle until its doors are very tightly closed upon their valvular hinge. Yet with apparent ease a whelk will with its radula or rasping tongue perforate one of the hard limy valves and greedily suck the oyster's contents. Several thousand pounds sterling being lost annually by the intervention of this enemy, who generally takes his prey unawares in the spat or culch form, or when the shells of mature oysters "gape" at spawning time. Oyster dredgers and planters used to tear the starfish limb by limb, flinging back these parts into the sea, with the worst possible result. Starfish thus mutilated often reproduced their missing limbs, and I am informed that "bits akashally grow'd in" a whole "uns, sir!"

I understand that oysters are hermaphrodite, like molluscs in general. At the age of four years, when mature, they gape in early summer to discharge a spawn which, though resembling a thick grey dust discharged in several directions, is really an incredible number of microscopic bivalves. Sometimes there are nearly two million eggs in their earliest stage with each not more than a square inch, but in six months' time each individual will, I understand, cover half a crown; or, in twelve months, a crown piece. Each "shot," or successive layer of shell matter borne by the culch or by the mature oyster, is supposed to indicate a year's growth. Up to the age of maturity at four years these shots are smooth; after that time they become irregular, rugged and humpy.

Dredged oysters, especially those taken late in the season, need a course of at least six months' rearing. The rearing brings them to a high pitch of perfection on his "market beds," from whence they are turned out as "natives," and fetch maybe thirty shillings a thousand, though he paid only a third of that price to the dredger. In some cases the dredger transfers them direct to the shallow water beds, breaking up the clusters before he tips them overboard to find their own level in the bottom. The beds are staked off into rectangles or oblongs, and are situated where they will be but little affected by neap tides, otherwise hot summer sunshine or winter frost would cause a heavy mortality amongst their tenants. Where it is possible to collect spat or fry, they should be received in a bed containing shallow water, the same being liberally covered with empty shells. The growing period between the planting and removal for market is ordinarily three years. During this time the oysters are given fairly natural conditions, and allowed to feed grossly on a soft bottom abounding in organisms brought in by the tides—including at times, no doubt, estuarine filth and deleterious germs. But between March 1st and July 1st the planter shifts what oysters are destined next for market from a soft to a hard bottom. By dint of various food supplies, natural and possibly otherwise, acres of large, clean, succulent oysters are dredged or taken with tongs from the market beds each autumn. The price they fetch—from 2s. to 3s. a thousand—leaves a handsome profit for the middleman.

That such important industries as oyster-planting should be allowed to suffer for want of schemes for the adequate disposal of sewage is abominable. Future generations will, no doubt, wonder at our lack of scrupulously clean habits; but I am optimistic enough to believe that the stigma will not stick to us much longer. Careful inspection of such food supplies, and scientific machinery to divert disease germs into proper channels, can safely be predicted for realization at no distant date. In the meantime it has been recommended that oysters be cooked in order to minimize dangers so often attributed to them when there is really none; but I cannot imagine 23 or more members of "Ye Antient, Honorable and Noble Order of Oyster Goblies" at Blackburn, in Lancashire, consuming 1,300 cooked oysters at supper; nor can I imagine Bernard Shaw blushing for the first and last time in his life when found one day devouring (raw) oysters in a sawdusted shop somewhere off the Strand in London. Figures as to the consumption of this local shellfish by individuals may look big and misleading when compared merely the fleshy mollusc without the shell. I do not think a quart or two pints will weigh more than 5 oz. at the outside.

FIGHT WITH WHALE.

Escapes Through Cordon of Killers But Is Finally Killed.

The capture of a splendid specimen of the right or black whale was effected in Eden Harbor one morning recently in full view of a crowd of excited onlookers.

The whale was first sighted off South Head by the lookout stationed there. The information was communicated by signal fire to Captain Davidson, who with a picked crew proceeded to the scene, meeting on the way some killers, who had gone to announce the presence of the whale, which by this time had entered the harbor, and was working round the shores of the bay under close surveillance of the main body of killers. These in a semi-circular formation kept at a little distance from the unsuspecting whale, watching the monster's movements, but suspending their attack until the arrival of the whalerboat.

Proceeding leisurely round the fore-shores the whale entered the cove, in which the wharf is situated. Seeing this, a scratch crew put off in another whalerboat, and by a skilful throw of the harpoon made fast to the whale. A scene of great excitement ensued. The killers, who hitherto had contented themselves with alertly reconnoitering, now attacked the whale with great fury, and a fierce encounter took place within a stone's throw of the wharf. The killers exhibited great ferocity, and the whale was spouting, plunging, and belching madly in a desperate attempt to evade the merciless onslaught. Suddenly the whale succeeded in breaking through the cordon of killers. Hotly pursued by the latter, it rushed towards the steamer Leewind, lying at anchor some distance off the wharf. Here in full view of the passengers and crew the desperate combat was renewed, and the second whalerboat joined in the fray. The whale turned again, and came to the aid of the wharf, desperately fighting its way round the Cattle Bay Quarantine, and onward until exhausted by the repeated lance thrusts and the incessant attacks of the killers, it succumbed.

GALLOWS IN RUSSIA.

Barbarous Method of Inflicting Capital Punishment.

Capital punishment in Russia means not merely death, but horrible torture, according to a correspondent of the London Daily News, who says the cause of humanity would be served if St. Strydom could be persuaded to introduce the guillotine.

Russian law does not permit of capital punishment, and, therefore, no machinery exists in Russian prisons for putting men to death, and the executions that take place under martial law are carried out in barbarous fashion. Persons sentenced to death in St. Petersburg are taken in the small hours of the morning to a lonely spot on the shore of the Gulf of Finland, not far from the fashionable watering place, Sestroretsk. A strong guard of soldiers accompanies the prisoners; the executioner, usually well primed with vodka, travels with them.

In the forest, odorless with pine, and silent save for the twittering of birds and the murmur of the placid waters of the pale sea, he fastens his rope to the branch of a tree. The halter is fixed to the victim's neck, and he is made to stand on a rough box. When all is ready a violent blow knocks him from his feet, and he swings beneath the trembling branches, in the grasp of Stolypin's necktie.

An official who was present at one of these executions stated that the victim struggled with death for twenty minutes.

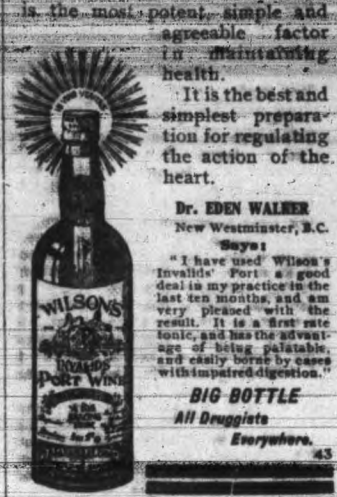

A municipal Pasteur Institute, where victims of dogs or other animals whose bites produce rabies can be cured for at cost or at the city's expense, is proposed by a Chicago alderman.

PEPE CARMONA'S BULL FIGHT

By Guy Nore Armstrong in The Idler.

It all happened because Pepe Carmona persisted in going to the bull-fight. Pepe was tall and young and handsome, a little bit pale and not very strong, with dark flashing eyes, high forehead and curly black hair. He was intensely religious, and went regularly to mass and confession, yet, nevertheless, he loved with all his Spanish soul to see the matador in the ring, sword in hand, waiting so gracefully, so nonchalantly for the charge of the bull.

Holy week had passed, and Easter morning had been ushered in with glad peals from the great bells that hang in the Giralda, that famous tower of the still more famous cathedral of the picturesque old town of Seville, and Pepe was glad, for the sun shone with splendor, as it has a habit of doing in the spring in Andalusia.

During holy week Pepe had regularly attended mass at the great Gothic church, and had offered up fervent prayers to the Virgin to whom he laid bare his simple soul, seeking not only for a blessing for himself, but for his mother, his father, all his family, not forgetting sweet-faced Anita, who, every one knew, was his promised bride.

While he knelt upon the hard stones that compose the floor of the towering cathedral, Pepe did not forget to put in a prayer for plenty of sun on Easter Sunday. Pepe, like all Spaniards, realized that bright sun and hot weather were necessary for a good bull-fight, as necessary, almost, as the bull itself, since when the bull is overheated he fights better, is more ferocious, and less sluggish in his actions.

So that Easter morning Pepe sat on a bench in the centre of the Plaza San Fernando, arrayed in his holiday clothes; his flat-topped hat—the hat worn by bull-fighters and their admirers throughout Spain—pushed off his forehead, because the weather was warm; for which Pepe returned thanks and was happy, for all signs indicated that the fight of the afternoon would be well worth seeing. To the excited group of friends who gathered about the plaza to discuss the event, Pepe showed two tickets—one for himself and one for Anita.

The tickets only entitled the holders to seats on the sunny side of the arena, where the price is not quite half what is asked for those on the shady side; yet Pepe evinced no regret, and he never occurred to his friends to mention it, for he, and they, considered him fortunate to be able to go at all, so many of these friends being compelled to content themselves with witnessing the spectacles of the crowd going to, or returning from, the Plaza de Toros—a sight well worth seeing, it is true, but hardly satisfying to the true native of Spain.

Coming across the plaza, as Pepe talked and gesticulated, was Anita, her black hair covered by her white mantilla—the black one she had worn during the Lenten season was put away now that the time of mourning had passed. Anita's eyes shone with pleasure at the sight of her handsome Pepe, and he, in return, looked at her with a smile that made her heart melt.

"See," cried Pepe, rising and showing Anita the two pieces of cardboard. "I have tickets for the fight."

"Oh, Pepe! I do not care to go this afternoon. Let us go next Sunday."

"Mia querida!" Pepe exclaimed, astonished. "Not to the bull-fight? I missed a bull-fight. I am going this afternoon and, my Anita, I wish that you go with me."

"But mio querido! my Pepe! I do not care to go to-day. Next Sunday," repeated Anita.

"Easter Sunday is the gala day of the year. Ricardo Torres is to kill the bull to-day. Ricardo is the champion of Madrid. Ricardo is great; more than that, he is a native of Seville, and no Sevillean is patriotic who does not wish to see him."

At the mention of Ricardo Torres Anita's color faded out of her cheek. She gave a quick start, and drew a frightened breath; but Pepe was too intent upon the picture, his mind formed of the great fight to notice the agitation of the girl who stood beside him.

"But still, my Pepe, I do not care to go," insisted Anita, and, putting her hand on Pepe's arm, she urged him to go alone. "One Sunday will not matter," she told him. "Go without me. Listen! If you not hear the church bells. It is time for mass. Are you not going?" and Anita's eyes flashed with a sudden anger.

Bewildered, Pepe disappeared within the immense doors of the holy building and stood in front of the great altar beside the girl who was to be his wife, and, at the tinkle of the tiny bell, knelt with her upon the hard floor, all the while those tickets burning like a hot iron in his pocket.

"And will you not go?" demanded Pepe, as they came out of the church. "Please do not ask me to go to-day. Anita begged as she shook her head. "I cannot go to-day. I do not care to see Ricardo in the ring. I am afraid to see him where the bull might hurt him. Next Sunday I will gladly go with you, but not to-day."

Pepe's eyes shot fire. His Spanish nature was aroused. He was jealous in a moment. Why should she fear for Ricardo? Perhaps he was a rival. "Then I shall take Isabel," Pepe threatened with a frown.

"Take Isabel if you must," Pepe responded Anita, angrily. "I suppose I can take whom I please," Pepe announced defiantly. "Assuredly." And Anita's eyes showed that she herself was not without a slight smile. "Take Isabel, if you please. But if you take Isabel, do not come back to me," she warned him.

"Am I Pepe Carmona to be told when I shall go—where I shall go—with whom I shall go?" And Pepe pushed his flat-topped hat on the back of his head, and looked very ferocious.

"Isabel," Anita responded with vehemence. "I do not say that you cannot take Isabel. Take her, but remember—do not come back to me," and Anita bounced out of the doorway of the cathedral, leaving Pepe standing there in a rage.

Pepe's evil star must have been in the ascendency, for he had hardly lost his breath when, as he stood under the Puerta del Perdon of the old half-Moorish, half-Spanish building, Isabel, coming out of the church, bowed to him and bestowed upon him one of her most winning smiles.

Pepe spoke to her, and to his invitation to go with him to the fight, she returned a ready acceptance. Isabel knew as who of Pepe's friends did not—that Pepe was affianced to Anita, and she was certain that he and his pretty sweetheart were quarrelled, but Isabel, the best friend namesake who at one time sat upon the throne of Spain, did not concern herself about things that did not immediately inconvenience her; and besides, Pepe was very handsome, and quite gallant.

That afternoon all Seville went to the Plaza de Toros, and it was a gay and brilliant sight.

Pepe went, and seated beside him was Isabel. They quickly found their places, and being among the first to arrive, sat long in the broiling sun waiting for the opening of the entertainment.

The watering cart came in and wet the ground thoroughly in order to lay the dust. The master of ceremonies rode his horse into the centre of the ring to see that all was ready, and then, after his inspection, and before the coming of the bull made the ring a dangerous place in which to loiter, went away; the picadores, four of them, urged their lame and broken horses into the ring and took their places at the different points allotted to them, at equal distances from each other.

Isabel, all in white, with a white mantilla over her head, sat oblivious, as Pepe, of the heat; eyes strained, ears open, waiting for the signal to begin, the signal given that day by the senior alcalde presidente.

Presently there was some commotion in the box of the officials, and all eyes were raised to it. The senior alcalde presidente himself stepped to the front of the box and motioned to the crowd for silence.

"Senoras and señores," said he, "an unfortunate accident has happened to Ricardo Torres. He is unable to walk except with a stick, and is not sufficiently recovered to permit him to perform to-day. I am very sorry to have to disappoint you, but such things cannot be helped," and with a wave of his hand he ordered the fight to commence.

There was a murmur of disappointment—only a murmur; for the Spaniards too well bred to be boisterous. The huge audience, the gate leading to the dark room in which the bull had been kept for the past two days, was opened, and the red sun, consumed by the noise and strange sights, fanned by the noise and strange sights.

A cheer went up, but it was presently drowned by another that came from the throats of the enthusiastic Spaniards when they saw their favorite, Ricardo Torres—enter the official box, walking with the aid of a stick. Pepe cheered too, but Pepe's cheer died on his lips when he caught sight of Anita—his Anita—being led to a seat by the peerless Ricardo.

There was no more bull-fight for Pepe. He sat through the killing of the six bulls, his eyes glued to the official box, wherein sat Anita. The bulls were brought out and tortured, and finally slaughtered, but Pepe saw none of it.

Anita! His Anita! His affianced wife! Who would not go to the fight with him! Who begged that he wait until the next Sunday! Who refused him! Sitting there beside Madrid's most famous bull-fighter, and talking to him on apparently familiar terms; nay, doing more than that—treating him as an old familiar friend; there, in the box of the great senior alcalde presidente; there before his very eyes, before all Seville!

"Cuatro diablos!" groaned Pepe, "bastante!" It was more than flesh, and especially the flesh that composed the proud body of Senior Pepe Carmona—could stand, and the jealous Pepe seethed and fumed and swore he would be revenged, and wished to leave the place.

Isabel showed no disposition to quit her seat until the last bull was killed. On the contrary, she seemed to enjoy Pepe's discomfiture, and pointed out to him, as if he could not see for himself, Anita, as she sat with her hand on Ricardo's shoulder.

At last the six bulls were despatched and the crowd surged out of the big building, and waited—that is, the underlings waited—to see the elite of Seville drive home.

an impression. "By the body of the Pepe, he dies! He dies to-night; dies, as he kills the bull weltering in his own blood," having determined which, Pepe found a grim satisfaction in setting the details of the taking-off.

Our bloodthirsty Pepe remained under the bank of the Guadalquivir, watching the dark stream flow toward the sea, perfecting his plans.

When it was quite dark he left, and took his way to the Calle de Los Arcos Católicos, where are situated many shops that make a specialty of offering for sale things either no longer wanted by their original owner, or placed on sale by some light-fingered gentleman who has, possibly, on some dark night, relieved the former proprietor of the worry of their ownership.

Stealthily Pepe entered one of these shops for the deed he was about to do. He caused him to be suspicious of everyone, even himself, and made his purchase, returning to the street armed with a long and sharp knife, which he secreted in his strong leather belt.

With the steady stride of a man who has determined what he is to do, Pepe hurried across town toward the house of Anita. He felt reasonably sure that Ricardo would be there, and Pepe's heart beat with a passionate fury when he pictured the bull-fighter lying dead in front of Anita's house, killed by him, the deceived lover!

Before many minutes Pepe entered the Calle Guzman el Bueno, and stood in front of the house of Anita. He waited. He waited. He listened at the half-open door.

He could hear the strains of a guitar and the clatter of the castanets, and someone danced within. Pepe knew it must be Anita, and when the words of a song were wafted on the still night-air to him he recognized Anita's voice.

"Ah, mia querida," sighed Pepe, as he leaned against the iron bars that protected the windows of the house; the same iron bars that he had grasped so many times as he stood under the soft moonlight in happier times, talking to Anita, singing with her, he playing the guitar, she the castanets; he in the narrow street, she behind the iron bars in her room, singing as he played.

"Ah," murmured Pepe, "those were happy times; but now my Anita sings to other ears. He shall pay for this," And brave, proud Pepe, grasped the bars and buried his face in his arms as he gave way to a passionate burst of tears.

He quickly suppressed his grief. Anita was dancing for another. The thought burned his temples, scorched his lips. Pepe knew by the sound the dancing was going on in the patio, and the passionate lover was well enough acquainted with the house to know he could see the patio from a rear wall, which, though high, he had climbed many times when Bombita chico, Anita's favorite brother, and Pepe's chum, had lived at home.

But Pepe hesitated. Was it dignified? Did it become a scion of the house of Carmona to eavesdrop? Why not go boldly by the front door?

"And put Anita on her guard," Pepe told himself. "No, I'll climb the wall and see without being seen."

So he hurried to the rear of the house, and in a short time was on the wall, and could see, as well as hear, Anita dance. She accompanied herself on the castanets and Ricardo played the guitar as she whirled in the passionate dance of Spain.

Around and about them sat the family of Anita; Senora Moreno, her mother, knitting; and Pepe could hear, from his high perch, the click of the knitting-needles in the pauses of the music.

At another side of the patio sat Rafael Moreno, Anita's eldest brother, with his wife and little Enriqueito. Enriqueito lay on his mother's knee, watching his energy in a futile attempt to put his toes into his open mouth.

In the centre of the courtyard a tiny fountain played, the trickle of the water cooling the hot atmosphere.

of the two women but promised that he would be careful in future.

"Yet there is no danger, my little Anita," continued he. "I am strong and quick, and can master any bull raised in Andalusia. Do you not love a bull-fight? What Spanish girl does not? And if you do, think of me. I stand in the centre of the ring and wait for the signal; the huge bulls, the gate is opened, the maddened bull dashes into the arena, looks to the right, to the left, and suddenly rushes at one of the picadores and in the instant the horse is thrown the bull is speared, and added to the pile."

"The matador then enters the arena, and the bull is speared, and added to the pile. The matador then enters the arena, and the bull is speared, and added to the pile. The matador then enters the arena, and the bull is speared, and added to the pile."

"And then," continued the matador, "I await my opportunity. Carefully choosing my time, I strike. I miss, perhaps, as I did in Madrid last Sunday, but not often. When I miss I jump out of the way and let the bull pass me by. Again, I spring over the bull's back and let him gore the empty air. I stand with the point of his horns on either side of my body, his head almost touching me, and laugh at his awkward attempt to hurt me. At these acts the crowd cheers, and yells itself hoarse. There is no danger, my Anita. I am as safe in the bull ring as I am here."

"Safer," thought Pepe from his place of concealment on the top of the wall, as he eagerly tested his long knife. "Oh, but Ricardo, you may be seriously hurt. It is not impossible. You could not fight the bull to-day because of the accident that happened to you in Madrid last Sunday. You admit yourself that you were hurt in the ring, and I feel sure that the bull nearly killed you."

"That was my own fault," laughed the gay bull-fighter, "and can never happen again. Come, Anita, dance for me. I would rather see you dance than fight the fiercest bull in Spain."

"Yes, Anita, dance," urged her mother. "There is no girl in Andalusia who can dance so well as you." And Anita, pleased as this praise, took the castanets, clapped them together, and swung into the centre of the patio.

This time Ricardo did not accompany her. He laid the guitar aside and watched the graceful girl. The step was dignified and firm, but soon passed into the rapid movements characteristic of the dances of Andalusia. Her body swayed and pulsated in time to the music, the castanets clapping faster and faster, her feet striking the hard pavement with a clatter that kept perfect time to the wooden clappers in her hands.

"Brava!" cried Ricardo, as Anita finished, and stopped to catch her breath. "Brava!" echoed the family, and Enriqueito coughed delightedly.

"Did I not say that no girl in Andalusia could dance so well as she?" demanded the proud mother.

"And no girl in all Spain, either," replied Ricardo, as he patted the dancer on the cheek.

"With my Anita, I must go," announced Ricardo. "I shall come early to-morrow. And the matador went out of the front door."

Pepe, at the first indication of the breaking up of the party, slid down from his high perch and ran round to the front door, bent upon murder.

As he waited at a distance Pepe could see the form of Ricardo limping down the street. He hated to take advantage of the lame bull-fighter, but Pepe had seen too much to stand upon such delicate moral grounds. He was determined that Anita should see no more of his rival—this man, evidently an old sweetheart, came back to-day to steal from him the fairest jewel in Seville; this fighter of bulls, who had come between him and his love.

With hatred in his heart, Pepe waited, and when Ricardo was opposite him, rushed upon him. The blow had sufficient strength in it to fell an ordinary man; but Ricardo was not an ordinary man. By the light of the street-lamp the glittering steel shone as it descended toward the head of the matador, but by a quick turn of the wrist, a trick he had learned in the bull-ring, Ricardo swung his cane and knocked Pepe's dagger to the farther end of the street; and with that same stick, gave Pepe such a beating as he had not had since the days when he used to fight with Bombita chico, who had long years ago left Seville, and had never returned.

Without troubling himself to see who his adversary was, Ricardo calmly went on his way and Pepe picked himself up, a sorer and wiser man, but still swearing vengeance.

It was a sorry ending to a well-arranged plot, but Pepe had not counted upon the enormous strength of the trained fighter.

During the next week, because of what he had attempted, and because he did not care to show himself in his battered condition and bring ridicule upon himself, Pepe remained at home, and did not leave what all of Anita's friends were talking about, which piece of information Pepe would have given his eyes to know.

When the next Sunday came Pepe went to the bull-fight, but he neglected to attend mass in the morning, for his soul was too blackened with thoughts of murder for him to dream of confessing to the priest; but he went alone into the amphitheatre, and took his seat on the sunny side. He cheered himself hoarse when a picadora was dismounted.

claimed in a loud and shrill voice that he would carry to the senorita a glass of milk, dozens offered to assist him, and fourteen thousand throats cheered merrily.

With a determined look upon his close shaven face and a perceptible limp in his left foot, Ricardo, urged on by these insults, vaulted the fence and faced the bull, and standing in the centre of the ring, coolly waited for the charge.

It was glorious! It was thrilling! With his sword ready the lame matador stood and cried: "Bravo Ricardo Torres! Bueno Torres! Bravo Grande Ricardo!" warned, where a moment before the insults had chilled the heart of the bull-fighter.

With a bow to the spectators Ricardo waited for the bull, but the sluggish animal was not in any haste. He had learned to his sorrow that the game he was expected to play had but one ending—and that not to his glory. Stubbornly he stood and pawed the earth and lifted up his great head and bellowed for assistance. Cautiously he walked toward the man who waited to destroy him, smelt of the red cloth that was thrown at him, and stood glaring at his tormentor. At length, as if he saw an opening, or trusting to his bull strength, he charged, and instantly, the sword of the matador was aimed at his neck—at the spot that would end it all if the sword struck true; but—this time it was not true. The sword struck, struck in the flesh, and the bull reared and rushed at Ricardo.

The jump was well taken, but was not quick enough; Ricardo's lame leg prevented that; and he was upon the horns of the enraged beast. For a moment he remained there, and the bull carried him nearly across the ring, and then threw him high in the air.

There was a shout of sympathy from the spectators, a rush of banderilleros at the bull, and while the animal's attention was being engaged by his tormentors, attendants carried the wounded man out of the ring.

Pepe crossed himself, and his conscience told him that the accident might have been the result of his wish. He was sorry now and more than ever afraid to face his father-confessor. He had not the heart to remain to witness the death of the bull, so he quietly left the great amphitheatre and went into the promenade that flanks the Plaza de Toros on one side. They were carrying Ricardo out as he passed, and Pepe looked at his white face and saw the blood on his temples and shuddered.

"It is only a broken arm," he heard the doctor say, "but he will never fight another bull."

Pepe went into the little church adjoining the Hospital de la Caridad, where they had taken Ricardo, and alone of the chapel, and there prayed long and earnestly, for Pepe's soul was very black indeed, and he was frightened at what he had done. He laid his head on the rail in front of him and prayed to be forgiven his great sin.

As Pepe prayed, he felt rather than saw a woman come into the chapel and kneel beside him. Her head was covered by a black mantilla, and, as she prayed earnestly beside him, he thought he heard sobs.

"Some poor girl in distress," thought Pepe, "but what is her sorrow to mine, who may be responsible for the death of a man?"

Sadly he turned to leave the chapel. His eyes met those of the devotee. It was Anita. For a moment Pepe looked at her sorrowfully, but all the hatred he had felt for the bull-fighter returned.

"I suppose you are praying for your injured matador," Pepe remarked with a sneer. "You, who can change your love so easily, will readily recover from your grief."

"Your brother! Your brother is not wounded. It is your lover," cried Pepe angrily.

"Did you not know that Ricardo, poor Ricardo, who is now dying, is Bombita chico, who went away so many years ago?"

"Who? Your little brother, who went to live in Madrid with your uncle, the famous bull-fighter?" Anita nodded.

"That is why I would not go to the fight with you," she said. "I was afraid that something would happen to him, and now he is dying, and Anita wept again. "Our Bombita chico would like to see you."

"In a moment," Pepe responded, and he led Anita to the altar and together they knelt and prayed, and mingled with Pepe's prayer were hot tears of repentance.

FRASER EXHIBIT

WILL BE CONTINUED

Many Attended Yesterday — Display Will Be Kept Open Until Further Notice.

By the courtesy of those in charge,
the Simon Fraser Exhibit and Pioneer History of British Columbia was open on Thanksgiving day and was visited by 2,500 people a continuous stream of visitors from early morning until closing time. It being estimated that at least 2,500 were present altogether. The interest manifested in the exhibit is most gratifying to those who have it in charge, and it is hoped that still greater numbers will improve the opportunity to learn more of the early history of their province.

The exhibit was visited this forenoon by a number of classes from the different city schools accompanied by their teachers.

Mr. Schofield assisted by Mr. Smith, Miss Russell, and Mr. Mason, gave interesting talks to the children, as they passed from one group of objects to another, and Mr. Schofield, showed by means of a large map, the course followed by Simon Fraser.

The exhibit will remain open until further notice is given.

The report of a cannon has been heard 14 miles.

PANTAGES THEATRE.

Jack Golden and Company Present Amusing Sketch "A Disturbed Honey-moon."

Twenty-five minutes' continuous laughter in the summing up of the delightful sketch "A Disturbed Honeymoon" at the Pantages this week. Jack Golden is undoubtedly one of the cleverest comedians on the stage and has surrounded himself with a very excellent supporting company.
The Seignior-Turn ring acrobats, a young man and woman, do a very graceful and difficult series of stadium feats on the ground and in the air.

Ruth and MacBarnatine are singers and dancers of exceptional ability.

Jack Atkins has a very pleasing voice and sings the songs that appeal to everybody, while his humorous stories are out of the ordinary. "Think of The Girl Down Home," is by far the best picture song in many weeks and the biography with the moving pictures of "Policeman for an Hour," and "Sheath Gown," are very funny.

Portland, Nov. 9. — The wrestling match between Ed O'Connell and Dick Hart here has attracted the attention of holders of Seattle, who think he seems more easy money in Portland.
He has challenged the new Multnomah club instructor to a handicap match, offering to bet $500 he can throw him three times in an hour. O'Connell weighs 50 pounds less than Hart, but from the class showing he made when after Hart there are not but a dozen men in the world who can accomplish what Hart offers to do. O'Connell is now training for his match with uring out breaks for it day and night.

Beauty and Comfort

Necessary Features of Decoration

BEAUTY AND HARMONY may prevail in a decorative scheme, yet it may utterly fail of its object—to add comfort to your home. A scheme that will combine these features is the ideal one—the one you want. You want the feeling of comfort, of homeliness, in your home. No matter what the cost or trouble, if this feature is lacking it is a failure.

Our long experience has taught us to understand your feelings that decoration is for your home's sake—not simply for art's sake—and this makes it worth while to consult us.
Pleased to have you come in and consult the drapery and decorative staff on any matters of home decoration you may be contemplating. It'll cost you nothing and you may learn something worth while. Just try.

There is nothing in the Mat Line that can beat the Wire Mat in protecting the house from muddy shoes of children and grown folks. These mats are made of best galvanized steel wire, peculiarly woven, so that, although you may roll it up like a piece of carpet it will, when in use, remain perfectly flat as a mat, with no curled corners to trip those who trample it.

We have just received a large shipment of these mats and now have a complete range of sizes. We highly recommend them. Come in and get one.

WIRE MATS—Size 16 x 24 in. each ..... $1.25	WIRE MATS—Size 26 x 48 in. each ..... $4.00
